Hitler Moves To Terminate Nazi Control Of Churches

Breaks With Mueller, Reichsbishop He Selected.

Revolt Danger Prompts Action

Chancellor Refuses to Accept Prelates of Former Friend.

Berlin, Oct. 25 (AP).—A crisis in Germany's bitter church controversy brought an almost open break today between Adolf Hitler and his reichsbishop, Ludwig Mueller, and foreshadowed, informed sources said, the Nazi government's early withdrawal from church conflicts.

The rift between the Reichsfuehrer and his one-time protector, portended in recent weeks by hostility to Mueller's dictatorial rule, came as Hitler announced he would not today, nor at any time in the future, receive Mueller for the purpose of taking his oath of loyalty.

Waits With Bishops.

Consternation and apprehension prevailed at the Reich's Protestant Church Administration Building tonight as Mueller and some two dozen bishops he had appointed waited in hope that Hitler would receive them.

It had been announced that the bishops would be sworn today, while the one-time army chaplain believed almost to the last moment that Der Fuehrer would crown his meteoric rise by taking the oath of fealty from him today.

A toothache provided Hitler, at first, with an excuse to postpone the meeting, thus delaying an almost inevitable crisis, but later he let it be known the ceremony would not take place at all.

Ouster Expected.

Observers readily predicted Mueller ultimately will be ousted, with Jaeger and other appointees of the Mueller regime, and that active Nazi participation in church affairs soon will be at an end.

Increasing opposition to Mueller, with its possibility of political catastrophe for the Nazi party, influenced Hitler to take sides against Mueller, authoritative sources said tonight.

Men as high in party ranks as Julius Streicher, of Franconia; Adolf Wagner, of South Bavaria; Erich Koch, of West Prussia, and Fritz Sauckel, of Thuringia, had brought the seriousness of the church conflict to Hitler's attention, arguing its great political significance.

Reluctantly, those close to him said, the chancellor let himself be persuaded to turn against the man to whom he was personally devoted because Mueller hid him in his parsonage at Koenigsberg in 1927 when police were hot on the Nazi leader's trail.

Detailed preparations had been completed for today's ceremony. The program for the solemn "act of state" and the chancellery was prepared, the German Broadcasting Service had arranged to let the whole Nation hear the ceremony and two dozen Nazi-minded bishops had flocked to Berlin for the ceremony.

Mueller himself, regarding the oath-taking ceremony as the crowning glory of his career, was waiting at his headquarters, together with the bishops, when word came that they would not be received.

Mad Canadian Murders Six

Quebec, Oct. 25 (AP).—The bodies of five relatives of J. Rosarie Bilodeau were found tonight in woods near Ste. Therese, a few hours after the man had been placed in jail, charged with shooting and killing an official in the postoffice here.

Police expressed the opinion that Bilodeau had become suddenly insane and committed the crimes.

At the postoffice Octave Fiset, divisional postal superintendent, was mortally injured by a burst of shots Bilodeau fired in a conference room.

Postmaster J. B. L. Morin was struck and gravely wounded before police cornered Bilodeau in a telephone booth.

Two of the five bodies found in the woods were those of Bilodeau's sisters. Another was that of his sister-in-law and two of those slain were male relatives of Bilodeau.

The three women were killed in a small patch of woods a considerable distance from the highway.

Authorities said Bilodeau apparently had gone to the postoffice soon after leaving Ste. Therese.

Bilodeau had been idle and ill for some time, associates said.

Buffalo, N. Y., Oct. 25 (AP).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt defended the expenditures of her husband's administration today in replying to the attack of Miss Natalie F. Couch, Republican candidate for Congressman-at-large.

Campaigning as an "individual" for her close friend and Democratic opponent of Miss Couch, Mrs. Caroline O'Day, the President's wife replied with words equally pointed to the demand of the Republican woman for a balanced budget.

"Miss Couch," Mrs. Roosevelt declared, "like many Republican men, asks for a balanced budget, but she has not told you how she would balance it.

"The reason we do not have a balanced budget is because of the unusual expenditures due to the depression.

"I ask you, will you stop feeding the hungry, will you stop helping the unemployed?"

Charges of Foe.

The President's wife and Miss Couch addressed a meeting of the Buffalo League of Women's Voters. Some 800 women attended.

Throughout Miss Couch's speeech, Mrs. Roosevelt scribbled notes profusely on a pad.

Miss Couch assailed the Government's entrance into the field of the air mail; decried what she termed "the break-down of the civil service system" and said "we have seen grow up again the old-time spoils system."

"I favor balancing the Federal budget," she continued, "the regaining of sound financial policies and the saving of the Nation's credit."

Miss Couch ended with the declaration that "for the last year and a half people of this country have no longer had a republic."

First Lady's Reply.

Mrs. Roosevelt, making the first political address ever delivered by a President's wife, was introduced at once and immediately defended the expenditures of the Roosevelt Administration.

Miss Couch had asked for changes in National policy to bring "renewed business confidence."

To this, Mrs. Roosevelt retorted: "Cast your eyes back before 1933. The Republicans were in power then. How did it happen these things (changes in policy to bring confidence) did not happen then?"

Replying to Miss Couch's declaration that the New Deal is destructive of individual liberty, she said:

"When we talk of unlimited individual liberty we must remember that for a long time under various administrations we did not have it."

Mrs. Roosevelt prefaced her remarks briefly by saying:

"I come not as the President's wife, though I realize you must think of me as that. I do it because I believe in being for people."

The Buffalo address was the first of five by Mrs. Roosevelt in behalf of Mrs. O'Day.

Engineer Collapses at Finish Of 'Bullet' Train's Record Run

Coast-to-Coast Trip Is Made in 56 Hours and 55 Minutes.

New York, Oct. 25 (AP).—Railroading's answer to aerial and automotive competition reached New York after a record-breaking run across the continent today, and the ensuing excitement caused the engineer to faint.

Fifty-six hours and 55 minutes after leaving Los Angeles, the Union Pacific's new stream-lined train, rolled into Grand Central Terminal with a cluster of new speed records to its credit. The previous transcontinental record was 69 hours and 7 minutes, made ten years ago.

Overcome by the press of welcoming crowds and the sudden easing of the strain under which he had labored during the long exhibition run, H. D. Robinson, assistant car supervisor of the Union Pacific, fainted on the station platform.

W. A. Harriman, chairman of the board of the Union Pacific and son of the West's great railroad builder, E. H. Harriman, hailed the train's performance as meeting all expectations.

"By next summer," he said, we will have three trains on weekly schedule from Chicago to the three Coast cities of San Francisco, Los Angeles, and Portland, making the run in 40 hours."

Harriman said the "biggest thrill" of the trip was when the Diesel-powered train stepped up to 120 miles an hour over a 2-mile stretch, a new sprint record for fully equipped trains.

Of equal importance with speed, he said, was economy of operation. The train, called the M-10001, traveled 1.4 miles on a gallon of 4-cent fuel oil.

U. S. Trio Wins Nobel Award For Medicine

2 Harvard Men, Rochester Scientist to Divide $41,806 Prize.

Stockholm, Sweden, Oct. 25 (U.P.).—The Nobel Prize for Medicine, one of the highest awards for public service in the medical profession, was awarded three United States professors in ceremonies here tonight.

The trio are Dr. George Minot and Dr. William Murphy, both of Harvard, and Dr. George R. Whipple, dean of the school of medicine and dentistry in the University of Rochester.

They were given the Nobel Prize for their work on a cure for pernicious anemia. Dr. Minot long has been famous for his discovery of the curative effect of liver on pernicious anemia. Subjects who eat liver showed remarkable signs of recovery, his experiments showed.

Dr. Whipple is world renowned as a pathologist.

The three scientists will divide a prize of 162,608 kroner, or $41,806 at present exchange rates, giving each doctor approximately $14,000 as his share of the prize for 1934.

Next came the wards in pnysics and chemistry, the middle of November; then the award in literature, prior to December 10, and the award for peace work.

Dr. Minot's experiments with liver gained international attention in recent years, particularly his injection of liver extract into the system of anemic persons. The discovery, fundamentally, is that a diet of liver as a base will cure a sufferer from anemia and pernicious anemia.

Dr. Minot and Dr. Whipple, working independently, both found that the organs of certain animals and birds, such as the liver, kidney, the heart and the walls of the stomach, but especially the liver, contain chemical substances that stimulate formation of red corpuscles in the circulating blood.

U. S. Fleet Traverses Canal in 42 Hours

Cristobal, Canal Zone, Oct. 25 (AP). Arrival of the oiler Neches at Balboa today completed the United States Battle Fleet's transit of the Panama Canal into the Pacific Ocean, an emergency crossing intended to stimulate war conditions.

Seventy-nine warships went through the canal in approximately 42 hours (unofficial figures), as compared with the transit of the 110 vessels in the opposite direction in 47 hours last April.

Ellen McAdoo and Actor Elope, Defying Senator, Lawyer Hints

Los Angeles, Oct. 25 (AP).—The possibility that Ellen McAdoo, 19, had defied threats of disinheritance and posible legal action by eloping with 38-year-old Rafael Lopez De Onate, screen actor, was intimated here tonight by William H. Neblett, law partner of her father.

"I don't know where she is, but it seems she has made up her mind to do something foolish," Neblett said after a visit to the girl's mother, Mrs. Eleanor Wilson McAdoo.

At the McAdoo home it was said Miss McAdoo, a granddaughter of Woodrow Wilson and daughter of Senator William G. McAdoo of California, had left there about 11 a. m., presumably to keep a luncheon engagement with De Onate.

Earlier in the day Neblett asserted Miss McAdoo would be cut off from her $10,000 a year allowance and might be subject to legal action if she eloped with De Onate. Mrs. McAdoo added the couple would not apply tomorrow for a marriage license as originally planned.

Miss McAdoo assented to this, and Neblett said the marriage was "definitely off."

Neblett said Mrs. McAdoo, who recently divorced the Senator, was "prostrate as the result of this situation. She joins the girl's father in saying she is against this marriage and will also refuse financial support if they are married.

"I have done all I could to bring this girl to her senses. I have substantial proof that this man, although he claims pure Spanish blood, is partly of Malay extraction. Records of the State Department received today tend to substantiate this. This knowledge has

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Efforts of Japan and the government it sponsors in Manchukuo to subject foreign oil companies to rigid control, obviously designed to assure adequate fuel for the Nipponese navy, yesterday became a grave international question as the United States, Great Britain and the Netherlands lodged protests with the Tokyo government.

This controversy, developing for some weeks, may have far-reaching effects on the course of international amity, it was agreed here. Unless speedily settled it is regarded as certain to estrange further the United States and Japan, thus adding another obstacle in the already thorny path of naval disarmament, now being discussed at London.

But this is not all, in the view of students of foreign affairs here. They pointed out the possibility of this controversy, involving as it does the policy of the "open door" in China, fanning into flames again the animosities and bitterness occasioned when the Japanese subjected Manchuria to a military control and established the present Manchukuo state.

Such an eventuality would raise questions of great consequence to the United States. This Government would have to decide whether it would continue to pursue an aggressive attitude in the Far East in defense of its traditional "open door" policy. The Manchurian situation has been dormant since the advent of the Roosevelt Administration and it is not known how far this Government would go now in purely Far Eastern affairs.

On the other hand, the controversy may be settled amicably, especially if there is a change in the present Tokyo government, such as was predicted yesterday by the Foreign Policy Association in a special bulletin. This organization reported that the newly formed Okada cabinet is threatened by sharp internal conflict over the issue of military versus civil rule in Manchuria.

Cabinet May Fall.

"It is not at all certain," the bulletin stated, "that the Okada government will be able to survive the burning issues raised by this dispute."

Overthrow of the army-supported Okada regime might result in modification of the Japanese program for the establishment of great naval power as well as its plans in Manchuria, which are being carried out along military lines.

The basis of the present controversy, however, is of vital interest to American oil producers. Moreover, if the Manchukuo government establishes an exclusive monopoly in oil, it is feared by this Government that it may soon create monopolies for other commodities to the detriment of American business.

With Japan demanding naval parity with the United States and Great Britain and threatening to withdraw from all treaty limitations if her demand is not accepted, oil becomes more vital than ever for the Nipponese. Not only are Japanese warships oil burners, but so are most of their modern merchant ships.

Has Small Supply.

Japan produces an inconsequential amount of oil and its only source in Manchukuo, oil shale deposits affording a very limited supply, now is earmarked for the Japanese navy. Thus the major part of Japanese oil needs must be supplied from abroad and the question of building up large supplies in case of war is of foremost importance. As the situation is represented

LaGuardia Vetoes N. Y. Lottery Plan

Bill to Aid Jobless Held of Doubtful Legality.

New York, Oct. 25 (AP).—Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia vetoed today a city lottery bill to provide funds for unemployment relief.

The action was reported to have been taken solely on the ground of questionable legality of the measure, which had been approved by the board of aldermen and the board of estimate.

Borough President James J. Lyons, of the Bronx, who proposed the bill, said he would go before the next session of the State Legislature in an effort to get through laws which would legalize a lottery.

Hit-Run Driver Kills Aged Pedestrian Here

Struck by a hit-run driver as he attempted to cross the street yesterday afternoon, William Duck, 79, of the Woodward Apartments, was injured fatally, dying in Georgetown Hospital at 6 p. m.

The man was hit by the machine at Tenth and M streets northwest, near his home. The driver sped away without stopping to give aid, according to the police.

Legion Votes For Prompt Cash Bonus

Belgrano, Commander, to Lead Fight at Next Session.

U. S. Asked to Rescind Interest on Loans Already Made.

The renewed fight over the soldiers' bonus brought these developments yesterday:

Miami, Fla., Oct. 25 (AP).—The American Legion today called upon the Government for immediate cash payment of the adjusted service certificates as a "most effective means" of hastening National economic recovery.

Frank Belgrano, San Francisco banker, was chosen 1935 National commander, succeeding Edward A. Hayes, of Decatur, Ill. He will direct the legion's campaign to obtain the bonus at the next session of Congress.

Fulfillment of the convention's bonus "recommendations" would entail disbursement from the Federal Treasury of about $2,000,000,000, but this, the legion holds, "will not create an additional debt, but will discharge and retire an asknowledged contract obligation of the Government."

Would Cancel Interest.

The legion, in the closing business session of the sixteenth annual meeting, aslo asked cancellation of interest charged against the certificates for loans already made to veterans, and a refund of collections made on this account.

This would save certificate holders an estimated $1,000,000,000, although much of this would be but a bookkeeping loss for the Government, and not a cash outlay.

With scattered boos directed at State delegations which opposed the action, the legion voted for the bonus resolution 987 to 183.

The resolution stated in part:

"That since the Government of the United States is now definitely committed to the policy of spending additional sums of money for the purpose of hastening recovery from the present economic crisis, the American Legion recommends the immediate cash payment at face value of the adjusted service certificates, with cancellation of interest accrued and refund of interest paid, as a most effective means to that end."

Other Business Settled.

The troublesome bonus question settled, the Legion transacted the following other business:

Demanded by voice vote that the United States rescind its recognition of Soviet Russia, declaring that country had not kept its promise that "Communistic activity" would cease in this Nation.

Adopted a mildly opposed resolution to deny use of the mails to "any publication advocating revolutions and overthrow of our form of Government."

Asked that school teachers be required to sign pledges of allegiance to the American flag.

Calles Backs Plan To Oust Catholics

Mexico's 'Iron Man' Says They Plan Revolt.

Mexico City, Oct. 25 (AP).—The influence of Gen. Plutarco Elias Calles, Mexico's "iron man," was thrown today behind the movement to expel archbishops and bishops of the Catholic Church from the country.

The former president and "supreme chief" of the revolution told deputies and senators who visited him at Cuernavaca that Mexican Catholics were planning a subversive movement but the government "will know how to meet it."

"I regard the expulsion of archbishops and bishops as necessary because they are the direct cause of the present agitation," he said.

Huey's Junket Called a Grab At Presidency

New Orleans Hears Trip Is Meant to Ballyhoo His Candidacy.

New Orleans, La., Oct. 25 (U.P.). Rumors swept through Louisiana political circles tonight that Senator Huey P. Long was using his spectacular football junket to Nashville as a means of announcing his candidacy for President of the United States on a "share-the-wealth" platform in 1936.

The Kingfish will invade Tennessee Saturday with five special trains loaded with followers, mostly Louisiana State University students. Nashville, home of Andrew Jackson, would be an auspicious site for such an announcement, it was pointed out.

Long has announced he intends to make a speech before the game between Louisiana State and Vanderbilt Universities. Two sound trucks, which have figured in every Huey Long campaign since 1928, have been sent ahead to Nashville to be installed, one at each side of the stadium.

Missouri Mail Man Is Freed by Abductors

Bolivar, Mo., Oct. 25 (AP).—William Lane, rural mail carrier kidnaped yesterday near Halfway, Mo., advised Sheriff William Killingsworth late today his abductors had left him at Haskell, Okla., and that he would be home "as soon as possible."

The finding of Lane's blood-spattered motor car earlier today near Melrose, Kans., had raised fears for his safety.

Committee of 40 Named by Bar, Meeting Is Set for Monday.

Conditions Assailed at Luncheon; Result of Takoma Slaying.

A public meeting backed by the 7,000 members of the District Bar Association will be held in the Mayflower Hotel Monday night to map out a campaign to suppress crime in the Capital.

A committee of 40 has been appointed by the officers of the bar association to propose at the meeting a plan of action and to direct discussion of District crime conditions along a prearranged schedule to be determined by the committee's study of the situation.

These were the developments yesterday as public indignation over the killing of a newspaper circulation agent early Tuesday and other recent crimes in the District took tangible form for the first time at a luncheon in the Mayflower, held by the bar association to honor Scott M. Loftin, president of the American Bar Association.

Indignation Meeting.

The announcement of the public meeting and the appointment of the committee of 40 was made following the luncheon by F. Regis Noel, president of the District Bar, while Attorney General Cummings, United States District Attorney Leslie C. Garnett and the bulk of the District's law enforcement officers were waiting for the usual after-luncheon speaking program to begin.

Mr. Noel's announcement was timed within two hours of the dedication of the new Department of Justice building by Attorney General Cummings and Mr. Loftin. It turned an otherwise normal luncheon program into an anticrime indignation meeting.

It was understood the committee of 40 will bring into the meeting Monday a resolution calling for the appointment of a permanent lay-legal commission to investigate crime conditions here and to formulate policies for assisting enforcement officers.

George Maurice Morris, Charles V. Imlay and Albert W. Fox, prominent Washington attorneys, were named to head the committee of 40 as chairman, vice chairman and secretary, respectively.

They will meet this afternoon with Mr. Noel and Robert Miller, who has been designated chairman of the public meeting, to plan Monday night's action. Invitations to attend the meeting are to be sent to all church and civic bodies in the District.

Action on Killing.

The killing of Allen B. Wilson, newspaper circulation man, by gunmen who reputedly had "on the spot" an alleged associate of Capital gambling racketeers, was responsible for the association's decision, Mr. Noel said at the luncheon.

"Things have been developing very fast," he began, then pointed to the Capital's abundance of legal talent, from President Roosevelt and several members of his Cabinet, who are lawyers, to the preponderance of attorneys in Congress and the 7,000 members of the association.

Repeal of prohibition, he said, has removed the last law from the statute books to which any attorney could possibly object. He urged the legal profession of the District to "get into this thing," then outlined the method proposed.

Attorney General Cummings, the next speaker, indorsed the association program, adding he believed it the "duty of the bar association in the District of Columbia to take a larger share in its government, particularly in the view of recent happenings and their implications."

Consistent Policy Need.

The crime problem can not be solved by "ballyhoo," the Attorney General declared, but a "consistent policy must be mapped out and kept in operation 365 days in the year."

"We must have the belief and

Models Defy Society Rivals; Threaten to Lure 'Boy Friends'

New York, Oct. 25 (U.P.).—Professional models voted tonight to war against society labor which is chiseling into the model business. Fifty mannequins held a meeting to protest the use of Park avenue debutantes, who have been picking up change by modeling for style shows. The professionals decided to picket the next fashion pageant that employs amateur models.

"And if that doesn't work," said Miss Gertrude Mayer, a brisk young lady with red hair who heads the mannequins, "we'll start copping off their boy friends."

Miss Mayer was indignant at a remark made by Mrs. Harold E. Talbot, jr., society leader, who declared professional models hardly could be ladies. "Professional models may try to look like ladies," Mrs. Talbott said. "If those who run fashion shows choose persons who have a society background, isn't the reason obvious?"

This was quoted to Miss Mayer.

"Try to look like ladies! Say, society couldn't make some of those Park avenue dames look like ladies in a thousand years. They're not only taking jobs away from girls that need them, but they're spoiling the business. A lot of them are hump-backed and walk like ducks."

Miss Mayer had a bevy of potential picketers around her that looked as if they could panic any fashion show—inside or on the sidewalk. She called on Marta Rocafort, an attractive brunette.

"Tell your story, dearie," she said.

"A society girl got my job," said Miss Rocafort. "I said to her what she wanted to work for, and she said to pay for a maid and a dog."

The models adopted a petition asking the Junior League and other fashion show producers to stop hiring society girls.

Roberts Faces Court Nov. 30 In Murder Case

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
Phone Alexandria 523.

Policeman George D. Roberts, under indictment for murder in connection with the slaying of three members of the Stuart family on October 14 at their home, 417 North Columbus street, Alexandria, will be arraigned in the corporation court, Judge William P. Wools presiding, on November 30, when a date will be set for the trial. The prosecution will be conducted by Commonwealth's Attorney Albert V. Bryan, and Roberts has retained Charles Henry Smith as his defense counsel.

Roberts, who has been in jail since the day following the shooting, has been indicted for the alleged murder of his father-in-law, Ward Stuart; Ward's brother, George, and William F. Stuart, father of the other two men. The shooting is understood to have followed a series of domestic tilts between Roberts, his wife, Mrs. Ardath Roberts, and her parents.

When Roberts, on duty at the time, went to his home for supper Sunday, he found his wife had taken their two small children and gone to the home of her grandfather, William F. Stuart, where her father also lived. Roberts went to the house, brushed by William Stuart, who attempted to prevent his entering, and went into the kitchen, where the family were at supper. After a few words he opened fire with his service revolver, instantly killing Ward Stuart, wounding George so badly that he died while on the way to the hospital, and shooting William twice in the abdomen. He died 12 hours later in the Alexandria Hospital.

Roberts then walked to police headquarters and gave himself up. He has refused to make any statement since.

Navy Day will be observed Saturday at the Alexandria Naval Torpedo Station, one of the features of the program being a schedule of torpedo launchings. The U. S. S. Cormorant will be moored at the station dock, and will be open to inspection by visitors, as will the plant, from 8 a. m. until 4 p. m. The torpedo launchings will take place at 9, 10, 11 a. m., 1:30, 2:30 and 3:30 p. m.

There will be numerous exhibits of naval interest on display, among them being one of 35 flags used in the Colonies prior to and during the Revolutionary period. This display consists of exact replicas of the original flags, and includes nine Virginia flags of the period.

The Alexandria Kiwanis Club held its Navy Day celebration yesterday, with Capt. H. L. Wyman, U. S. N., on duty at the Navy Department, as guest speaker, in the Virginia room of the George Mason Hotel.

Capt. Wyman talked informally of the naval building program now under way, and defended the Navy as the "great peacemaker," as he said President Theodore Roosevelt termed it, and the battleship as the backbone of the Navy. In illustrating the comparative effectiveness of battleships and airplanes, he said that if a battleship were firing salvos of 14-inch guns on a target, and airplanes were dropping 1,000-pound bombs, it would require 30 planes to equal with their bombs the effectiveness of one salvo; and that to continue this effect would require 300 planes, going to and fro between their carriers and the target, and that six carriers would be required as bases of operation for the planes.

Nominations for the new Kiwanis officers were announced yesterday, and these will be voted on next Thursday.

The Alexandria United Charities will open its annual drive for funds Sunday, November 4, according to D. C. Book, president of the organization, who has named J. Frank Myers as chairman of the men's division of the drive, and Mrs. Evelyn Dillard head of the women's division.

The United Charities maintains permanent headquarters at King and Washington streets, and during the past year has been most active in furnishing aid to the indigent, and to the children in the various public schools who are in need of assistance. Its work is supplementary to that of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration, and takes care of many cases which can not properly be handled by the Federal agency.

President Book and the board of directors have given assurance that virtually every penny of the money contributed will be applied directly to charity, as the overhead of the Alexandria United Charities is practically nil.

The Alexandria Chapter, DeMolay, held a Masonic Night in the Elks' hall last night, when they were hosts to members of the Masonic, Eastern Star and Job's Daughters. Llewellyn Gillum, master councilor, presided and welcomed the organizations, and Vernon Dove was chairman of the entertainment committee. An elaborate entertainment program was staged, followed by a dance.

Two Alexandria chain stores were broken into either Wednesday night or early yesterday morning, the robbers escaping with $68. This amount was taken from the cash register of the Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company's store at 1301 King street, the loss being discovered by Marshall Finnell, manager, on opening the store yesterday morning. Entrance was gained by bending aside iron bars in a rear window.

The other store entered was the Sanitary Grocery Company, 1630 King street, which was entered in the same manner, but nothing was taken.

Hummers' Parade Wednesday.

Hagerstown, Md., Oct. 25 (Spl.).—Several thousand persons will watch the annual Mummers' parade from the same bleachers used during the Roosevelt inauguration at Washington, the Alsatia Club, sponsors of the parade for 17 years, announced. The parade will be held Wednesday night.

Between You and Me

Mr. Roosevelt's Speech to Bankers Called Adroit Bit of Statesmanship.

By Raymond Clapper

Mark down as a smooth piece of management the handling of President Roosevelt's appearance before the bankers' convention. It gets a 100 per cent score.

Consider the situation Mr. Roosevelt was up against. Some bankers had been clamoring for a definite statement from Mr. Roosevelt as to budget balancing and cessation of Government recovery spending. Some wanted a definite statement regarding international monetary stabilization. Mr. Roosevelt did not feel that he was in any position to make definite commitments on these highly complicated subjects. To do so, he reasoned, would be to tie his hands in dealing with an unpredictable future.

Most of the more intelligent bankers understood his difficulty and sympathized with it. Yet the expectation of definite commitments from the President had been built up in advance so conspicuously that there was danger of his address proving a severe disappointment to many banker delegates. There was Mr. Roosevelt's problem—to avoid making definite promises and still not disappoint this highly important audience of key men, and send them back to their communities in a frustrated mood.

At this juncture, it happened that an old banker friend of Mr. Roosevelt—and he does have old friends among the bankers—appeared on the scene. He was Mr. Jackson E. Reynolds. Mr. Reynolds is a Democrat. Once he taught law at Columbia University and Mr. Roosevelt was one of his students. He has frequently conferred with Mr. Roosevelt and has the most friendly desire to help his former student succeed in his difficult job. What is perhaps more important, Mr. Reynolds happened to be in an excellent position to render a friendly service at the bankers' convention. He is president of the First National Bank of New York, an ultra conservative institution, whose prestige, together with his own, makes him a spokesman whose word carries maximum weight with his fellow bankers. He is no wild theorist, but, on the contrary, one of the apostles from the heart of Wall Street.

So he prepared several rhetorical questions which he read to the bankers' convention just before President Roosevelt spoke.

One asked if—we bankers—might not be in error in expecting budget balancing at too early a date or in expecting a precise date to be named for it. Mr. Reynolds also asked whether, in view of the uncertainties of foreign currencies, any of us—us bankers—would care to tie our hands by asserting now that the present value of the dollar would henceforth be maintained always and forever.

Thus, by rhetorical questions, posed by one of its own most eminent figures, was the bankers' convention softened up in advance and put in the mood to accept Mr. Roosevelt's refusal—graciously phrased—to answer those two questions which have so agitated the business world.

It was not a trick. If statesmanship consists in part of bringing about willing acceptance of the unwelcome inevitable, then President Roosevelt and Mr. Reynolds ought to go to the head of the class.

The American Legion convention has voted, 987 to 183, for immediate cash payment of bonus certificates. It would cost $2,000,000,000. It also voted in favor of the Government remitting interest on loans already made to veterans on service certificates. That would cost, roughly, $500,000.

Thus the legion, which hitherto has resisted immediate bonus payment drives time after time, succumbs to the powerful forces of the period. If the Government is putting out billions for all sorts of recovery spending, why not pay off now a debt which comes due in a few years anyway, the veterans ask?

The legion's action is of greatest political importance. It is a question whether the next Congress, in view of this action, will support a Presidential veto if, indeed, there should be one. It is a question also whether such payment could be made without direct monetary inflation. Will Congress direct the President to use the optional power he now has to issue $2,500,000,000 in paper money under the Thomas amendment?

Thus new uncertainty is thrown about the prospects of any progress toward a balanced budget.

The story is that a relative of the President's mother, who handles her estate matters, was in a quandary as to how to invest a sum of money resulting from the calling of some bonds held by the estate.

The relative wrote to the President asking for some assurance that if he invested the money in bonds they would not depreciate through subsequent devaluation of the dollar.

In a few days a letter from the relative arrived at the White House.

It said in substance: "Your letter received. I have invested your mother's money in Government bonds. Now you are the trustee."

"I still love Ellen," De Onate said earlier in the day, "and I believe she still loves me. Mr. Neblett may say all he pleases, but I do not believe he succeeds in alienating Miss McAdoo's affections."

Neblett warned that Senator McAdoo would disinherit his daughter if she persisted in flaunting his disapproval of the marriage to a man he has not seen and does not know.

"Ellen has been spending $10,000 a year," he said. "I have discovered that De Onate's average annual earnings in the last five years have been $1,000. Now that her father has said he will stop her allowance if she marries this man, I feel certain there never will be a marriage."

Expansion Aid By Banks Is Recommended

Economic Policy Group of A. B. A. Urges Display of "Initiative."

Bankers were urged to foster and assist business expansion yesterday in a report to the American Bankers Association by its Economic Policy Commission.

The commission, headed by Leonard P. Ayres, Cleveland financier, emphasized the need for display of "initiative" by business men, but urged bankers to be "courageous."

"Two main conclusions follow from a consideration of the developments which have produced the present abnormal conditions in banking," the commission reported.

"The first is that American business will again become a good customer of American banking when the prospects for making business profits promise to justify the risks of borrowing. The initiative must be that of the business man. It can not be that of the banker.

Government Vital to Banks.

"The developments of this period have conclusively demonstrated that credit availability can facilitate enterprise, but can not create it. Unless, and until, productive business expansion takes place on a large scale the Federal Government must remain the most important customer of the banks.

"The second conclusion is that the policy which should guide bankers in their operations during this period should be that of fostering and assisting business expansion. The criteria for credit expansion should continue to be the time-tested standards of community service, responsibility of the borrower and security of the loan.

"This is a time when good banking must perforce be courageous banking and likewise it is a time when courageous banking must be vigilantly resolute to be good banking."

Depression Low in 1932.

"The results of these multiple attempts to induce an expansion of bank credit," the report added, "have been disappointing. The lowest point of the business depression as measured by the volume of industrial production is more than two years behind us in the summer of 1932, but the volume of commercial loans of city banks was then nearly 16 per cent greater than it is now.

"One of the most important lessons of the depression is that the employment of bank credit depends not only upon its availability, but also and primarily on the ability and willingness of business men to borrow.

"In the attempt to attract new loans banks throughout the country have made successive reductions in the rates charged borrowing customers until now these are lower than they have ever been before, since the records showing them have been kept. Business will borrow at any rate, however high, if it can use the credit profitably, but it will not borrow at any rate, however low, if it can not make a profit by the use of the funds."

High building costs were deplored by the report.

Building Costs Near 1929.

"The costs of new building," the investigators observed, "are too high to encourage new construction. Building costs have recently advanced almost to the high levels of 1929.

"Meanwhile, prevailing rents are only about two-thirds as high as they were in the prosperity period and this disparity seems likely to prevail as long as many distressed properties continue to overhang the real estate market in most of our cities.

"The other outstanding important cause of shrinkage in the volume of banking activity appears to be the decline in the volume of new corporate financing."

Recovery of business activity, the report held, has been slow "because of the continued uncertainties about the possibility of making profits.

David Lawrence Declares Nation Headed for Dictatorship.

With leaders pledging cooperation with the Administration and members loudly cheering a severe attack on it by a guest speaker, the sixtieth annual convention of the American Bankers Association adjourned yesterday.

Resolutions expressing faith in the present banking structure and calling for early balancing of the National budget were adopted in the final general session at the National Theater.

Rudolf S. Hecht, New Orleans banker, who was inducted as president of the association, pledged the bankers "to patriotically carry on * * * toward finding a wise and sound solution of the Nation's economic problem."

Only a short while before a packed theater accorded David Lawrence, editor of the United States News, whole-hearted applause and a final rising ovation after he had made a scathing criticism of the New Deal, tempered with praise for President Roosevelt.

The address was the most outspoken against the Administration that the bankers had heard during their convention.

Cooperation Pledged.

Both Hecht and Francis Marion Law, the retiring president, were prompt in promising the cooperation solicited by President Roosevelt in his address Wednesday night, without commenting on the tenor of his remarks.

"We desire to assure the President," said Law, "that the banks have full confidence in the people. The bankers liked the clear statement of the President that labor of mind and hand were entitled to fair profits for this labor."

Most of the 4,000 bankers started home yesterday afternoon, not to meet again until the next annual convention in New Orleans. Some stayed in Washington to participate in the convention golf tournament today.

The resolutions submitted by a committee headed by Max B. Nahm, of Bowling Green, Ky., noted that "many constructive changes have taken place in the Nation's banking structure during the past year."

"Banks today are in a strong position and eager to cooperate in the normal expansion of business enterprise," the resolutions, adopted by unanimous vote, read.

"Reports indicate encouraging signs that business is now beginning to seek a greater volume of bank credit, which has been and is available for its use."

Urges Budget Balancing.

Turning to the budget issue, the committee stated:

"The American Bankers Association believes that the establishment of a balanced National budget at the earliest possible date is essential to the National welfare and an important factor toward world recovery."

The resolutions recognized "that emergency expenditures are at times called for in the interests of human welfare," but pointed out that "understanding statesmen meet such emergencies as they arise, but at the same time make it clear that expenses can not be allowed to exceed income indefinitely."

The President recognized this principle, the committee added, in his message to Congress last January, when he "wisely took occasion to call attention to the fact that these expenditures should not be continued as a matter of permanent policy.

"The reestablishment of a balanced National budget would eliminate the fear of currency inflation. It would insure the stability of our monetary system, which is fundamental to the general development of aggressive business plans as a major element in National recovery, reemployment and economic security.

"A balanced budget would of necessity curb tendencies to extravagant public expenditures, and would induce a similar action by States and municipalities.

Suggest Check on Taxes.

"Finally, it would be a decisive influence in keeping the burdens of taxation within the capacity of productive effort and enterprise."

President Hecht, following his induction, sounded a note of optimism when he said:

"I do not mistrust the future. Dangers still lie in our path, but we shall conquer them. Nor do I think the clouds are as black as they have been painted. I am certain that we have passed the worst of the storm.

"However, there can be no doubt that the time calls for courage and cooperation of every part of the population, and let it never be truly said that the banking fraternity is not doing its full share.

"On the contrary, I wish in concluding to assure the President of the United States that the American banker will play his position on the All-American team, pledging the best efforts of heart, hand and mind."

Earlier he spoke of the President as "a good mariner, steering us safely between the Scylla of reckless inflation on one side and the Charybdis of state socialism on the other."

While urging the bankers to "have faith in our navigator," Hecht added:

"This does not mean that we should not make known the submerged rocks of which our experience tells us. I am optimistic enough to believe that such warnings will not go unheeded if we approach the navigators in the right spirit."

Lawrence Attacks "Spoils" System.

The address by Mr. Lawrence brought the convention to a tumultuous close. Taking as his topic "A Look Ahead," he charged the Administration with adopting the creed of "to the victor belongs the spoils" and said the same view was held by "an overwhelming majority of both houses of Congress."

Discussing recent political developments, Lawrence said:

"Today we are witnessing under the guise of public welfare an attempt by political groups and leaders to consolidate into a single Government both the political and economic power in America. Such a merger, such a combination in restraint of human freedom, such a centralization of power must not and can not be allowed to prevail.

"Today we are observing an effort to break down not only the relations of the three branches in the Federal Government under the pretense of changed conditions but at the same time a tendency to break down the independence of the States themselves. * * *

"This is a serious hour in American history—a struggle for the preservation of an American system of freedom. It is a fight against a new tyranny masquerading today under the cloak of a new-found liberty for the masses.

Sees Parties Destroyed.

"It is in truth the beginning of an effort at political dictatorship which will destroy our major political parties altogether and substitute a dictatorship of a class ruled by a skillful group of self-seeking men, the new reactionaries. * * *

"The movement to resist such reactionaries will not be stilled by invective or by ridicule. The people of America will fight against reactionaries whether they come from the left wing or the right wing. Control of the purse strings of the Nation will never be permitted for any length of time to rest in the hands of a few persons in Washington or in the control of a political autocracy of any kind."

Says President Is Frank.

Lawrence said he regarded the "President as a great political leader" who has "the remarkable gift of intuitive reasoning or the faculty of perceiving the fine currents of American life.

Lawrence said he was convinced that the President "speaks frankly when he says he does not know what American policy is going to be far ahead, from one play to another. * * * My own belief is that the same set of plays which worked in the first year and a half of the present Administration will not work again."

Lawrence criticized the so-called "brain trust" as being too academic and "lacking the practical technique that comes out of actual experience with economic forces and currents."

Turning to increasing Government regulation of business, Lawrence said:

"As between the two evils, I prefer the system which places more reliance on the individual and upon private business than upon a supposedly all-wise government."

The two divisions of the Federal Housing Administration were discussed briefly by Roger Steffen, director of modernization of credits, FHA., and J. Howard Ardrey, deputy administrator of the FHA.

Asks Simple Examinations.

A resolution, offered from the floor by W. G. Edens, vice president of the Terminal National Bank, Chicago, calling for simplification and standardization of the bank examinations, was referred to the executive council by the assembly, and later referred by the council to the president of the American Banking Association.

The resolution authorized the President to appoint a committee consisting of a National bank examiner, a State bank examiner, a clearing house examiner, a Federal Reserve Bank examiner and a Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation examiner to study the matter and consult with the United States Treasury.

'Jafsie' Insists HauptmannGot Ransom Cash

Jersey Declared Planning to Charge Baby Was Slain in Crib.

Trenton, N. J., Oct. 25 (AP).—The web of evidence encircling Bruno Richard Hauptmann tightened today with the disclosure that Dr. John F. Condon, the celebrated "Jafsie" of the Lindbergh kidnaping case, had positively identified the German carpenter as the man to whom he paid the $50,000 ransom money.

An authoritative source also revealed that New Jersey will assert at the trial of Hauptmann, starting January 2, that the Lindbergh baby was slain in his crib the night of March 1, 1932.

The State will contend that the infant's body then was carried down the ladder by which the kidnaper gained access to the second-story nursery of the Lindbergh home at Hopewell and buried in a shallow grave 2 miles away.

Evidence Is Undisclosed.

Whether the prosecution has some carefully guarded evidence to support the contention that the child was killed as he slept could not be ascertained. Informed sources declined to reveal if the baby's crib was blood-stained or if it gave other indications the infant was seriously or mortally injured before he was carried down the ladder.

One high source, admitting the State would seek to prove that the baby was first killed and then taken away, said this contention would not preclude under New Jersey law the prosecution's charging also that the child was killed during the kidnaper's flight down the ladder, or subsequently.

Official sources, including Attorney General David T. Wilentz, as well as Dr. Condon himself, refused to deny or confirm that "Jafsie" had determined, during an hour-and-a-half visit with the prisoner in Hunterdon County Jail yesterday, that Hauptmann and the mysterious "John" were the same person.

Claims Two Meetings.

That the identification was made, however, was learned from an unimpeachable source, who added Dr. Condon also had identified the carpenter as the man he met March 12, 1932, when the intermediary demanded some article to prove he was dealing with the actual kidnapper or his agents.

This man, met by "Jafsie" in the Bronx, promised to send an article of clothing worn by the baby and Condon four days later received a sleeping garment identified by the Lindberghs as that of their son.

Dr. Condon paid $50,000 to the man known as "John" in a Bronx cemetery April 2. It was said that during his conversation with the prisoner in Flemington yesterday Dr. Condon discussed with Hauptmann many of the things he and "John" talked about during their meeting in the Bronx.

Lawyer Faces Contempt Case

Attorney, Client Charged With Attempting to "Sell Information."

Justice Joseph W. Cox, in the District Supreme Court, yesterday cited Walter Armstrong, an attorney, and Harold Yeider to show cause November 2 why they should not be adjudged in contempt of court because of their alleged attempt to "sell information" possessed by Yeider.

The citation was issued by Justice Cox mainly on the strength of an affidavit filed by Assistant United States Attorney John W. Fihelly, who told Justice Cox the two men "unlawfully and corruptly and with an improper purpose" approached attorneys for Mrs. Alice M. Nolan and offered to sell them for $1,500 certain information "which, if true," could be used by her in a divorce suit against her husband, William J. Nolan.

The Nolan suit is now pending before Justice Cox. Illness of William E. Leahy, attorney for Mr. Nolan, has delayed the case.

Armstrong and Yeider approached Henry I. Quinn and Austin F. Canfield, attorneys for the wife, Wednesday night, with a proposition to sell testimony damaging to Nolan, the court was told. Quinn notified Fihelly and he, with Detective Sergeant Earl Hartman sat in a nearby office and heard the conversation between the men. Armstrong held a contract with Yeider by which he was to act as the latter's agent.

'Daddy' Browning Cuts Off 'Peaches' From His Millions

New York, Oct. 25 (AP).—Edward West (Daddy) Browning disinherited his estranged wife, Frances (Peaches) Heenan Browning, "from any of the benefits of my estate except such interest as the law provides for her," it appeared in his will filed today.

The remainder of the estate, estimated at several millions, after the deduction of 10 per cent for carrying expenses of the Browning holdings, will be divided into six portions to be dispensed each year "as a prize for the best results achieved during such year" in six social and humane fields.

Nellie Adele Lowen Browning, a prior wife of the eccentric "Cinderalla man," likewise was cut off from the estate, but only because other provision had been made in an agreement of December, 1923.

Idle Millions Must Get Jobs, Says Richberg

Twice Warns Employers U. S. Must Otherwise Outlay More Cash.

New York, Oct. 25 (AP).—Business was challenged twice today by Donald R. Richberg to reemploy millions of idle workers or face cheerfully the alternative of new Federal endeavors for economic recovery and reconstruction.

Both times he stressed better housing as offering a tremendous field for putting money and people to work.

Then, as director of President Roosevelt's Emergency Council, Richberg declared:

Urges Private Credit.

"This work should be undertaken by private enterprise and financed by private credit. If, however, the aid of public credit or public direction is found necessary, is it not clear that such governmental activities would be a sounder economic program than a continuance of public expenditures principally in direct relief or unproductive work relief?

"Such an extension of public projects is, however, undesirable if the alternative of increased private employment is available. * * * Government can not continue indefinitely to borrow money that does not earn a return any more than a private corporation can do this."

Richberg spoke at a dinner of the Harvard Business School Club. He opened his speech by remarking:

"It has been said cynically that the difference between the old deal and the New Deal is that the old dealers proved they could not operate our political economic system successfully, whereas the New Dealers have not yet proved their inability. * * *

"More briefly, and I hope more accurately, * * * the old deal did not work and the New Deal may work."

Addresses Bond Club.

Earlier in the day he had told the New York Bond Club:

"We face the issue which is clearly emerging: Will private enterprise undertake now the great and necessary task of reemploying at least four or five million willing workers, or must the Federal Government undertake to bring this about, either indirectly or through underwriting private activities or directly through the expansion of self-liquidating public projects? * * *

"If private initiative is so weak, if private capital is so timid, if management and labor are so lacking in vision that private enterprise will not march ahead to solve its own problems, then let no one criticize, but let every one applaud a Government that has the courage and strength and vision to undertake the job."

Richberg told both business groups that 18 months of New Deal activities have constructed a firm foundation on which private enterprise can build a new economic structure.

President Attends Dedication Of Classic Hall of Justice

Unrelenting War on Crime Demanded by Loftin, Bar President.

President Roosevelt in a business suit, most of official Washington in top hats and an audience of nearly 1,000 less distinguished persons watched Attorney General Cummings and Scott M. Loftin, president of the American Bar Association, dedicate the Department of Justice's new $9,000,000 home at Ninth street and Pennsylvania avenue yesterday.

The ceremonies, delayed once by a carpenters' strike and again by rain, were held in the classic building's inner courtyard where the National colors hung from window sills and where State banners and chrysanthemums decorated a speakers' platform raised over a subterranean garage.

President Roosevelt was late and the Navy Band entertained the gathering with a musical program that included "The Last Round-up." Some 15 minutes after the dedication was scheduled to start the President pulled up in an open car. Postmaster General Farley was with him, and sat beside him on the speakers' stand.

Hughes an Early Arrival.

By this time most of the dedicatory officials had found seats. Among the early arrivals were Chief Justice Hughes and Mrs. Hughes. They with members of the Supreme Court bench and other governmental dignitaries were led to places of honor on the platform, members of the local bar associations in morning coats acting as ushers.

A large delegation from diplomatic row occupied front chairs directly before the platform. Behind them sat representatives of the District legal department and other officials, likewise in formal dress.

J. Crawford Biggs, the Solicitor General, acted as master of ceremonies, introducing Mr. Loftin and Attorney General Cummings, the only speakers. Mr. Loftin pledged the cooperation of the Nation's lawyers with the Government's war on crime, declaring "the time has come when there can not be a truce with crime nor even a pause in the pursuit of criminals."

"Common Enemy of Mankind,"

"Gangsters, racketeers and organized criminals of every type and sort, like pirates on the high seas, are the common enemy of mankind and must be treated accordingly in our war against them," he continued. He described the associations' program as a Nation-wide effort for the coordination of National, State and local associations in a drive to eliminate lawlessness.

The President sat attentive throughout the Loftin speech, his face serious and intent; but he broke out his famed laugh when Attorney General Cummings, in a humorous account of the department's history, described Edmund Randolph, of Virginia, the first Attorney General, as "the 'forgotten man' of his day."

"Truly, at last," he said, "we have come home and, in saluting this magnificent edifice, let us indulge the hope that it may always house what is truly a Department of Justice; and be a temple in which judgment, compassion and understanding, may ever find habitation and in which that fire 'which burns at the heart of the world and whose name is Justice' may never die."

The building, a seven-story structure done in simple classic lines, is the first home the department has had since the office of the Attorney General was established in 1789.

Trod 2,000 Miles To Serve Term, Prisoner Freed

Joliet, Ill., Oct. 25 (AP).—The man who walked 2,000 miles so he could go to jail is free today.

More than a year ago, Admiral Walker wrote Joliet Penitentiary authorities from California that he wanted to serve his term for the slaying of two men in a card game there several years before.

The Joliet police chief replied that it would be too expensive to send for Walker, but promised him a term if he would come back. Walker returned under his own power, and entered the prison.

Today he enjoyed liberty again, freed on parole.

Jury Fails to Agree In Trial of F. S. Tyree

Lynchburg, Va., Oct. 25 (AP).—A mistrial ended today the trial of Sergt. Fauntelroy S. Tyree for his removal from office on the grounds of malfeasance, misfeasance, gross negligence and incompetency, which allegedly resulted in the jail deliveries here in September.

The jurors deliberated about four hours before Judge Aubrey E. Strode, of Corporation Court, was notified they were hopelessly divided and with no prospects for reaching an agreement on any of the four specifications under the rule. As a result, Sergt. Tyree is scheduled to be tried again in November.

Fourth Place Derbyists Plan To Race Back

Melbourne (Friday), Oct. 26 (AP). Cathcart Jones and K. W. Waller, confident their fourth-place Green Comet was the fastest ship in the London-to-Melbourne Air Derby, today made plans to backtrack the long grueling trial to "Down Under."

With nine other derbyists still plodding over the route, Waller and Jones sought to find some one willing to race them back to England, but were quite willing to fly the course alone.

"Out to Australia and back in eight days, that's the idea," Jones said.

Leaders Little Interested.

C. W. A. Scott and Campbell Black, K. D. Parmentier and J. J. Moll and Roscoe Turner and Clyde Pangborn, the British, Dutch and American teams that finished first, second and third in the 11,300-mile race, were content to rest their feet on the sod of Australia after the wearing trip down.

But Jones and Waller, who with the other three shattered the old record for the London-to-Australia flight, had more ambitious ideas.

Squadron Leader Malcolm MacGregor, of New Zealand, was expected to be the next Derby pilot to reach Australia, and he, too, bids fair to smash the old mark of 161 hours and 56 minutes for the London-Darwin flight set by Charles T. P. Ulm in 1933.

Others Still Racing.

Before MacGregor lay the 511-mile hop over Timor Sea from Kupang, Timor Island. He took off at 5:25 p. m. yesterday, G. M. T., for Darwin.

Behind him were J. E. Hewett and C. E. Kay, also of New Zealand, who left Batavia for Rambang, Dutch East Indies, at 6:52 p. m., G. M. T.

Hot rivals for sixth place, Squadron Leader D. E. Stodart, of England, and Lieut. M. Hansen, of Denmark, prepared to take off from Alor Star. C. J. Melrose, of Australia, took off from Rangoon, Burma, at 7:15 p. m. yesterday, G. M. T. John H. Wright and John Polando, of the United States, whose arrest by Persian border authorities cost them their good chance for handicap money, were safely at Jask, while trouble of one kind or another stalemated three lagging entries at Bushire, Cyprus and Athens.

Kingsford-Smith Sets Sea Hop for Monday

Suva, Fiji Islands, Oct. 25 (AP).—Sir Charles Kingsford-Smith, Australian flier, said today he would not attempt to resume his transpacific flight until Monday.

The flier and his navigator, Capt. P. G. Taylor, hoped to take off today for Honolulu, but a strong cross wind at Naselai Beach, 20 miles from here, made it too dangerous to attempt to lift the Lady Southern Cross with its heavy load of fuel.

Young Physician Shot By Unknown Gunman

Brooklyn, N. Y., Oct. 25 (AP).—Dr. A. Nathaniel Rosen, 32-year-old physician, was in a critical condition in Jewish Hospital tonight with bullet wounds suffered at the hands of an unknown gunman.

The physician was shot as he stood in front of his office talking to two women patients last night. He had just closed his office and was standing at his automobile when his assailant approached and opened fire. Four bullets struck him.

RFC Proposes New Mortgage Market Relief

Jones Offers 'Partnership' to Companies to Break Loan 'Log-Jam.'

In an effort to break the "log-jam" in the real estate mortgage market, Chairman Jesse H. Jones yesterday announced regulations under which new mortgage trust companies may be organized in "partnership" with the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

Entering a new field, the corporation offered both to buy preferred stock or capital notes in trust companies primarily engaged in the mortgage business, and to make loans to this type of concern and to mortgage loan companies.

The purpose of this new venture was described by Mr. Jones as an attempt to help restore life to the $35,000,000,000 represented in urban mortgages alone. If taken up on his proposal, the RFC stands ready to advance millions for the following four purposes:

To provide new construction in cases where the enterprise to be financed is "soundly conceived."

To make loans at "reasonable rates" to holders of mortgages who would suffer if forced to sell.

To refinance mortgages in cases where the value of the property will support the mortgage.

Declares Need Is Great.

Declining to speculate on the response his offer might invoke, Mr. Jones made it clear, nevertheless, that he regards the creation of a "sound mortgage market" as the most important opportunity now before the RFC. He declared the need is particularly great in the larger cities, including Washington.

As a means to this end, Mr. Jones explained that the RFC will put up 50 per cent or more of the capital of new mortgage trust companies through the purchase of preferred stock or capital notes—an operation similar to the RFC acquisition of bank stocks.

In this manner he envisages the formation of a new system of trust companies, which would provide the machinery for the refinancing of distressed business properties throughout the Nation. Old, depreciated bonds now glutting the market would be succeeded by new issues based on revised values.

3½ Per Cent Interest.

Under the terms of the RFC proposal, 3½ per cent interest would be charged on the new capital advanced for the period from January 31 to the same date in 1940. Thereafter, until the capital stock is retired by the company under a graduated repayment plan, the interest would be 4 per cent.

In addition, the RFC will make loans to mortgage loan companies already in the field, provided they meet certain conditions, as well as to the companies it proposes to help organize. Among those eligible to borrow will be the new National mortgage associations now being set up under the Federal Housing Administration.

Cites Aid to Homes, Farms.

Pointing out that the Federal Government already is engaged in large-scale refinancing of mortgages on homes and farm lands, Mr. Jones declared that the RFC now will fill out the program by participating in the rescue of business property—hotels, apartments, warehouses and office buildings.

Efforts to assist in the refinancing of this character of real estate have been made intermittently, without success, for more than a year, he declared. The RFC is prohibited from making direct loans to individuals for this purpose, thus making necessary the formation of intermediary organizations.

As he launched this program, the RFC chairman also announced that direct loans to industry have increased slightly. Loans authorized now total $18,500,000, but disbursements are only $3,000,000. Mr. Jones pointed to RFC repayments of more than $2,000,000,000 during the depression, however, as evidence that banks can still find "good loans."

Britain Is Reported Against Arms Quiz

London, Oct. 25 (U.P.).—Reports were current tonight that the British government will reject demands in Parliament for an arms inquiry similar to the recent investigation in Washington, despite growing sentiment in favor of such a hearing.

The Daily Telegraph predicted the demands would be refused on the grounds such an inquiry "would present opportunities for hurling wild accusations without adding to the sum of public knowledge, outweighing any possible advantages."

The recent Washington inquiry aroused intense interest here, particularly the references to King George as having had an indirect part in certain arms deals in the past.

NRA Labor Unit Demands Open Code Hearing

Public Debate Asked on Auto Pact Changes Following 3-Hour Meeting.

(Associated Press.)

NRA's Labor Advisory Board renewed its demand yesterday for a public hearing on the American Federation of Labor's proposed changes in the automobile code.

William Green, acting chairman of the board and president of the federation, carried the demand to Clay Williams, chairman of the new NRA administrative board, after a three-hour meeting of the labor group.

Williams said, however, he was not in a position at this moment to say what would be done. He added no application had been received from the Automobile Chamber of Commerce for either extension, modification or a hearing on the code.

The federation's proposals for changes in the code, as outlined by Green, are:

(1) Elimination of the "merit clause," which expresses the employers' right to hire, fire and promote without regard to membership in any labor organization.

(2) Higher wages.

(3) A 30-hour work week.

(4) Stabilization of production to eliminate, as far as possible, seasonal peaks and dips.

After a 60-day extension, the code will expire November 3. Prior to his resignation as NRA chief, Hugh S. Johnson had promised the board he would give labor a chance to speak its mind on labor provisions before a new code was adopted or the old one again extended.

Green's insistence on revision coincides with the federation's renewed drive to organize the industry's labor into an industrial union, approved by the San Francisco convention.

"It is a matter of transcendent importance," he said after yesterday's board meeting.

Among other subjects discussed was the appointment of a new labor representative on the advisory council. Labor now is represented by John Frey of the A. F. of L. Metal Trades Department and A. W. Tracy of the Electrical Workers Union. Neither was able to give sufficient time to the job, Green explained.

Strengthening of the collective bargaining provisions of the labor clause would be one of the changes sought, he said.

Gold Program Tried for Year, Future Hidden

Roosevelt Remains Silent on Any New Effort to Raise Prices.

(Associated Press.)

The Administration, on the anniversary of the start of its program to lift commodity prices by raising the dollar price of gold, kept its own counsel yesterday on whether the efforts would be resumed.

With the gold content of the dollar now at 59.06 per cent of its old figure, President Roosevelt has authority to cut it to one-half. There has been no indication he contemplates such a move, for the present at least.

Since last October, the price of the metal has been pushed from $31.09 an ounce to $35—at which figure it has been held since formal gold devaluation by Congress last January.

Wholesale Gain Less.

The gold price increase of about 12.5 per cent has been accomplished by a gain in wholesale commodity prices of only approximately 7½ per cent, as measured by the Bureau of Labor's statistic index. They stood October 13 at 76.4 of the 1926 average.

The demand for further dollar devaluation has not subsided, but two factors are offered by some observers as possibly militating against such a development. One is the prevalance of reports that moves to stabilize the dollar in relation to the pound are being considered tentatively.

The Administration has given no indication that this is in prospect, but Robert W. Bingham, Ambassador to Great Britain, speaking in Edinburgh Tuesday, projected such a possibility as desirable. In some quarters it was believed he would not have touched on this subject unless his attitude had at least tacit White House approval.

Mr. Roosevelt, in his address to the Nation's bankers Wednesday night, noted a "growing appreciation" abroad "of the desirability of arriving, as quickly as possible, at a point of steadiness of prices and values."

Stabilization Rumors.

Rumors of stabilization have been current since the pound dropped below $5 after long ruling above it. Its old dollar parity is $4.8665. Both currency units have depreciated approximately the same extent in terms of gold.

Another factor which some observers believe weighs against further increase in the dollar price of gold is that commodity prices have not risen proportionately as the dollar price has been cheapened.

Since the March, 1933, banking holiday, wholesale commodity prices have gone up about 28 per cent, but the price of gold has risen from $20.67 to $35, approximately 69 per cent.

The Administration has given no indication the theory has been repudiated, but has let it be known that the 1926 price level as such is not specifically sought. Previously this had been considered in many quarters as an objective.

Social Problem Session Called Here Nov. 14-15

Miss Perkins Says Experts Will Draft Program for Congress.

A National conference on "social legislation," which will be proposed at the coming session of Congress was called here yesterday for November 14 and 15, by Secretary of Labor Perkins, chairman of the President's committee on economic security.

"We are planning round-table discussions at which our major problems will be considered, as well as several general meetings," she announced. "One of these will be at the White House, at which the President will speak."

Almost 200 experts on social insurance and other related subjects will be invited, Miss Perkins said.

Report Due in December.

"The committee on economic security has been functioning for several months, but its report to the President is not due until December," Miss Perkins said. "No conclusions have been reached and the committee is still open-mindedly considering all suggestions."

However, upon two questions—employment insurance and old-age pensions—the committee members are agreed, it is understood. In addition, the committee is considering the problem of economic loss resulting from illness, particularly in families of small income.

Advisory committees for medicine, dentistry, hospital management and public health are being named, Miss Perkins said. The medical advisory committee will consist of 11 eminent physicians and surgeons, she said, including the presidents of the three principal medical associations.

Townsend Plan Assailed.

Present as she announced plans for the conference next month was Dr. Edwin Witte, executive director of the committee, who took occasion to harpoon the so-called Townsend plan, which would give a $200 pension to all persons over 60 years of age provided they spend it immediately.

Dr. Witte declared that investigation had shown the Townsend plan would involve $24,000,000,000 a year, requiring a 12 to 15 per cent tax on all money transactions, including salaries. He said that the committee has been deluged with letters recommending it as a panacea for the depression.

The study of "social legislation" has proceeded under the general supervision of President Roosevelt himself. Besides Miss Perkins, the members of the committee, on economic security are Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, Attorney General Cummings and Relief Administrator Hopkins.

Attempts to 'Sell' Tugwell To American Farmer Collapse

So Administration Plans to Keep Him in the Background.

(Associated Press.)

Attempts to "sell" Rexford G. Tugwell to the American farmer not having met with hoped-for success, the Administration plans henceforth to keep its "brain truster" Undersecretary of Agriculture in the background.

AAA policy makers apparently agree that the speeches and public appearances of the former Columbia professor have had little effect in dispelling what they say was a popular belief in the corn and grain belts that Tugwell did not have sufficient respect for the Constitution. They also agree it was a mistake to let the undersecretary's name be associated with the proposed foods and drugs bill which was carved to pieces in a Senate committee during the last session.

Some of Tugwell's associates believe the feeling against him is based partly on the fact that the undersecretary wears his clothes too well and looks too much like a motion picture star to suit the average plowman. Regardless, the sentiment is there.

Rift Is Denied.

Officials say it would be foolish to endanger vital proposals by thrusting Tugwell forward to advocate them. The controverted amendments to the agricultural adjustment act will be an issue again at the next session, but Tugwell will not appear before Congressional committees to plead for their approval.

Sources close to both Secretary Wallace and Tugwell, however, denied emphatically yesterday the recurrent report that there had been a rift between the undersecretary and his chief. They insisted that there had never been a fundamental difference of opinion between the two and there was none in sight.

Tugwell's influence, and it has been potent, probably will be just as great in the future, at least, so far as AAA is concerned.

Friendly With Roosevelt.

Theoretically, the youthful economist has no connection with the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. But the Department of Agriculture has become an appendage of AAA and Tugwell's real work will be with the adjustment organization.

He has been a frequent visitor at the White House and probably will continue to be for he and Mr. Roosevelt talk over many things outside the farm realm.

Tugwell's friends assert that he dislikes the limelight, anyhow, and was thrust into public notice by attacks upon him. He was singled out as "brain truster No. 1" after Raymond Moley left the State Department.

Tugwell is now attending the international institute of agriculture in Rome. He is due to return in mid-November. Some observers thought it significant that he left just before the election campaign grew warm. AAA officials said yesterday that he had planned the trip for months.

Jimmie Walker's Finances Scanned Again by Jurors

New York, Oct. 25 (AP).—The extended investigation into the personal finances of the city's former "playboy" mayor, Jimmie Walker, was resumed today when Daniel C. Mulloney, former president of the Federal National Bank of Boston, was called before the Federal grand jury.

Frank W. H. Adams, first assistant United States attorney, who questioned Mulloney, indicated that several more sessions will be held before the jury reaches its conclusion on Walker's income taxes. Another hearing will be held tomorrow, and there are many more witnesses to be heard, he said.

Income tax evasion is not an extraditable offense. Walker and his second wife, Betty Compton, a former actress, have been in Europe since early in 1933.

Adams indicated that the inquiry, which started in June, 1933, after the reappearance of Walker's alleged fiscal agent, Russell T. Sherwood, the "mystery man" of the Seabury investigation of the city's affairs, would not be concluded for several weeks.

$2,000,000 Will Contested.

St. Louis, Oct. 25 (AP).—Four nephews and nieces of Mrs. Theresa Kulage, a papal countess, who left virtually all her $2,000,000 estate to Catholic organizations, filed suit today to contest the will.

Killer Indicted And Sentenced Within an Hour

Life Term Is Given Slayer of Night Watchman in Alexandria.

Indicted by a special grand jury, arraigned in the corporation court, tried and sentenced to life imprisonment, all within 1 hour and 5 minutes, Theodore Gibson, colored, 25, of Alexandria, was taken to Richmond yesterday to begin serving his sentence for the murder of William H. Woodfield, 71, night watchman at the coal yard of William A. Smoot & Co., early last Thursday. This is believed to be a record for administering justice in Alexandria.

Gibson said the slaying of Woodfield occurred between 1 and 1:30 a. m. last Thursday. He said he was going through the coal yard, alone, when he was accosted by Woodfield, who ordered him out of the yard. Woodfield struck him, he said, whereupon he picked up a small sledge hammer and struck Woodfield twice on the head.

Gibson said he then stole Woodfield's watch, and dragged the body about 50 feet to a point near the coal office, jumped over a fence and ran north along the railroad tracks. He claimed he hid the watch under a pile of railroad cross-ties at Oronoco and Fairfax streets in Alexandria and then visited friends in northeastern section of the city, and since then had been dodging the police.

Shortly after the murder William A. Smoot offered a reward of $250 for the arrest and conviction of the slayer. It is understood the reward will be divided among the arresting officers.

The police records show that Gibson served a sentence of a year and a day in 1933 for burglary, and had been arrested many times for minor offenses.

2,635 Already Enrolled In Scholarship Contest

Educators Loud in Praise of Post Competition; Entire Classes File Entries; Arlington School Head Lauds Project.

Enrollments and commendations this week reaching headquarters of the second Washington Post Scholarship Competition at The Post, from numerous school officials, including county superintendents, principals and teachers, indicate that the project, recently opened for the current year, is receiving unqualified approval and widespread cooperation throughout the entire competition area, which embraces Washington, Alexandria City and 40 counties in Maryland, Virginia and West Virginia.

Entire classes in civics, economics, American history and English, according to the enrollments received, have already inaugurated group discussions, background reading and research work preliminary to actual writing of essays on the contest's stipulated governmental topics, in the race which offers eight full scholarships at American, Catholic, Georgetown and Howard Universities, for finals champions, as well as silver medals and certificates for interschool and school champions.

A total of 635 individual pupils were reported as participating, bringing the competition's present enrollment to 2,635. Students in the eight Washington public senior high schools, totaling 2,000, were entered upon the project's announcement, by George J. Jones and William M. Brewer, directors of history and civics studies.

Kemp Comments.

Fletcher Kemp, superintendent of Arlington County schools, announced his intention of presenting the competition to eligible pupils under him. "The Washington Post," he stated, "is certainly to be commended for its continued interest and efforts in behalf of education. Your essay subjects set up problems for investigation that are most important in current life, and should present a real challenge for investigation and study on the part of our pupils."

D. N. Davidson, superintendent of schools of Orange County, Va., praised The Post and cooperating universities for "focusing attention of our high school pupils upon the type and character of problems selected." "I feel," he added, "that a large amount of real political service will result from such a project."

"I want to commend you most highly in this effort to encourage keen mental rivalry among the young people in high schools throughout this section," wrote C. V. Shoemaker, superintendent of Shenandoah County, Va., schools. William H. Keister, in approving the competition for the Harrisonburg, Va., schools, of which he is superintendent, commented: "What you are doing is splendid."

Edwin W. Broome, superintendent of Montgomery County, Md., schools, wrote: "As we understand this competition, a very inviting opportunity is offered to high school seniors to participate in an undertaking that provides awards of college scholarships. We are glad to commend this undertaking to our eligible students."

A total of 105 students have already enlisted in the competition at Alexandria (Va.) High School, according to word received from Henry T. Moncure, principal. Their essays will be given regular credits in the American history classes of Misses Mary Waller Dickinson and Euneta Pratt, in the civics class of Miss Ruth Elgin and in the economics class of Miss Dorathy McDaniel.

The entire student body of St. Peter's High School at Westernport, Md., from the freshmen through the senior classes, will write the essays under Sister Teresa Mercedes, according to information received from Sister M. Carmela, the school's principal.

St. Marys Students Enter.

At St. Marys Female Seminary, at St. Marys City, Md., Miss M. Adele France, principal, has entered all sophomores, juniors and seniors in the social science, American history and European history classes of Miss Ruth Evelyn Byrd.

All juniors and seniors will participate in the high schools of Dayton and Gordonsville, Va., and in the Chancellor High School at Fredericksburg, Va. H. C. Shull, principal, and Mark E. Myers and Miss Annie M. Silling, teachers, will direct the Dayton contestants, and J. Thomas Walker, principal, and Miss Elsie Vernon Shenton, English teacher, will supervise the Gordonsville entrants. At the Fredericksburg school the project will be directed by M. F. Starnes, principal, and Leroy Hilldrup and Miss Riba Dameron, of the faculty.

At Cumberland, Md., all juniors and seniors are taking part at the Frederick Street High School under Earle L. Bracey, principal, and Miss Ruth Franklin and Lewine Weaver, teachers.

Alfred L. Wingo, principal of the Washington and Lee Agricultural High School at Montrose, Va., has entered 58 students, who will receive supervision and credits in his own civics class, in the American history class of Miss Frances Reed and the English classes of Miss Mary H. McKenney.

At the Port Republic (Va.) High School, 36 students will participate under Hobart M. Earman, principal and civics teacher, and Miss Mary O. Miller, civics teacher.

At the Toms Brook (Va.) High School, contestants will work under the direction of M. S. Roller, principal and history teacher, and Miss Edythe Getz, English teacher.

Thirty seniors at the Franklin-Sherman High School at McLean, Va., will compete under G. C. Cox, principal, and Mrs. Hanna C. Young, teacher of history and civics.

At the Clifton Station (Va.) High School, George A. Watts, principal, has enrolled the students of Miss Dorothy Dail, English and civics teacher.

Gardner Shugart, principal of the Marlboro (Md.) High School, has entered his entire senior class. Thomas Gwynn, jr., of the faculty, will be in charge at this school.

At the Taneytown (Md.) High School John F. Wooden, jr., principal, has enrolled his entire class in problems in American democracy.

G. O. P. Report Lists $52,000 Party Deficit

(Associated Press.)

The Republican National Committee in a report filed with the House of Representatives yesterday listed contributions of $90,205 and expenditures of $92,660 for the period between September 1 and October 20.

On the latter date, it had a $52,150 deficit.

Some larger contributors were Col. W. P. Draper, of New York, $10,000; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Davidson, of Detroit, $5,421; Mrs. Ruth Pratt, former Representative from New York, $5,000, and Roy D. Chapin, former Secretary of Commerce, $2,500.

Campaign Expenses.

The campaign expenses of Senatorial candidates in Pennsylvania led the list of contributions and expenditures filed by various candidates with the secretary of the Senate.

Joseph F. Guffey, the Democratic candidate in Pennsylvania, reported contributions of $2,800.86 and expenditures of $2,734.24.

His Republican opponent, Senator David A. Reed, listed no contributions and expenditures of $2,631.10.

The Senate Campaign Funds Committee has announced it would investigate expenditures in the Keystone State.

Johnson Spends Nothing.

Most of Guffey's expenditures were listed for telephone and travel expenses, postage and clerical help.

"No promise or pledge has been made to any one," he said, at the end of his disbursement column.

Besides Reed and Guffey, Senator Frazier (Republican), of Maryland, reported receipts of $105 and expenditures of $697. He received $100 from Robert Larson and $5 from J. Paulson. Of the expenditures, $500 was listed under the name of L. J. Siljen, Republican campaign manager. The remainder went for advertising.

Mills Charges 'A Losing Race' To Roosevelt

Sees 20 Million in Need by '35, 'a New Peak in Destitution.'

Indianapolis, Oct. 25 (U.P.).—Ogden L. Mills carried the Republican campaign fight into the Middle West tonight with a denunciation of the Roosevelt Administration, charging it was hamstringing the American economic system and spending billions of the taxpayers' money, giving false stimulus to economic recovery.

The Secretary of the Treasury under the Hoover Administration told the Indianapolis Chamber of Commerce the New Deal was losing the race for recovery, and appealed to the people to show the men in Washington the way to a sound program for the good of all.

Mills warned that by January no less than 20,000,000 people in the United States would be "recipients of relief—a new peak in the annals of destitution," adding that "industrial production in much lower than a year ago."

He told workers that their wages might be slightly higher, but asked them to realize that "real earnings have declined as a result of increased cost of living." He declared that despite "infinitely greater resources, superiority of industrial equipment and efficiency of labor we are being outdistanced by practically every other major country."

"There's something very definitely wrong," Mills said. "While Washington won't admit it, thoughtful men and women everywhere are becoming increasingly anxious."

Mills defended the time-tried system of individual enterprise and sought to show how, through too much Government regulation of business and agriculture, too much price fixing and checks on the flow of capital, progress disappears. He said such a situation would cause the hamstringing of "the American economic system," and asked, "isn't that what's happened?"

Mills charged the World War was responsible for the 1929 crash, and defended the activities of the last Republican Administration under President Hoover, which he emphasized were devoted to efforts to "cushion the fall."

He said the New Deal had failed to follow a sound recovery program, pouring out billions of dollars instead, with the threat of inflation just around the corner.

District Joins Hunt for Killer Of Allen Wilson

Ballistic Expert to Aid Montgomery Police; City's Gaming Dens Empty.

The police drive against organized gambling and crime in the District gained impetus yesterday as Maj. Ernest W. Brown assigned Detective Sergt. Floyd Truscott and Lieut. John Fowler, ballistics expert, to confer with State's Attorney Stedman Prescott of Montgomery County in an effort to find the murderers of Allen B. Wilson, newspaper circulation man.

Truscott and Fowler were told to lend all possible assistance to Montgomery County and Maryland State Police, who are seeking the gunmen who fired at Wilson from ambush early Tuesday morning, apparently mistaking him for "Mickey" McDonald, reputed "big shot" gambler, at whose home Wilson was delivering a paper.

Lieut. George Little, head of the vice squad, said yesterday that gambling houses throughout the city were closed and the haunts of known gamblers deserted.

The "numbers racket," however, continued to flourish, with operators sending their helpers along their usual routes.

All but one of the suspects held in the last two days for questioning in the Wilson killing have been released, police said last night.

John M. Harris, 32, a merchant of the 1300 block of M street northwest, arrested Wednesday night for questioning, was charged yesterday with carrying a concealed weapon and possessing a revolver from which the serial numbers had been removed.

He is not being held for investigation in the killing of Wilson, however, police said. His companion, Stiles B. Simmons, 33, of the 1400 block of R street northwest, taken into custody with him, was released.

Maj. Brown emphatically denied a report that several known gamblers had offered to produce the murderers of Wilson in return for lack of pressure on their activities by police.

understanding of the people," he said, "and we must have some coordinated organization to make America the land it ought to be where life, property and the sanctity of the home are inviolate."

The same belief was echoed by Mr. Loftin, who pointed out that the problem was chiefly one for the local association to handle inasmuch as the American Bar lacked authority, in general, to "discipline lawyers."

Obviously aroused, District Attorney Garnett declared abolition of the parole and probation systems and of indeterminate sentences would "put the fear of God in the criminals."

Corporation Counsel E. Barrett Prettyman, who said he could speak for the District Commissioners, asked the association to include his office and the lower courts in its crime action.

He was born in 1880 near Bowie, Md., the son of the late Marion Duckett, well-known Maryland attorney. He was educated at Central High School here and at Columbian Law College, now George Washington University.

He is president of the University Club of Washington and is a member of the Board of Trade. During the Spanish-American War he served with the Army in Cuba.

Bowie to Settle Its Book Battle

Submits Row Over Library to an Arbitrator.

The Bowie book battle has been submitted to an arbitrator.

Miss Adelaide Pratt, of the Maryland State Library Commission, was called in yesterday to settle the dispute over the necessity for a public library in Bowie, Md. She will meet tomorrow with the trustees and officers of the one-room library at the solicitation of a group which contends the library is essential.

The three trustees of the library, soon to retire, caused considerable anguish to the Bowie reading public by announcing recently they were tired of the responsibility, and intended to call a junk cart to haul away most of the books, giving the remainder to the Bowie High School.

Bowie citizens who had donated books, subscribed cash, and served as voluntary workers for the library, arose in wrath, pointing out that the library is "in the black" financially, and fills a constant need.

Lawyer Pummels Overton in Fight

three minutes before bellboys stopped the fight.

Their Stories Jibe.

Henry, demanding an apology for a remark Overton made about him on the floor of the United States Senate a year ago, said he "slapped" Overton on the first blow.

Overton said Henry "struck" him when his hands were down.

At any rate, Henry led with his right, which may be unorthodox, but it was most effective. It split Overton's eye and the blood spurted.

Overton, short and fleshy, waded in "and fought the best I could," he said.

Henry, tall, lean and fast, stood off and punched in the general direction of Overton's head. Most of his blows must have landed.

"I don't think my blows were very effective," Overton said afterward, laughing. He continued:

"There were a lot of people standing around and I heard someone yell 'stop 'em,' but nobody did. I guess we must have fought for three minutes and then I lunged at Henry and slipped to my knees. That was when somebody did stop the affair."

Prescott Flays Fusionists in Two Speeches

Dissects Their Platform in Potomac School and Takoma Park.

Dissecting the Fusion platform, State's Attorney Stedman Prescott, Democratic candidate for State senator from Montgomery County, last night addressed two Democratic rallies, one in Takoma Park firehouse and the other in Potomac School.

The State's attorney declared the Silver Spring Bank, of which Ira C. Whitacre, Fusion candidate for treasurer, is an officer, has a total of $332,000 more county deposits than the Takoma Park Bank, which was attacked by the Fusion speakers as a favored county bank.

He declared the Fusionists should name every job they consider unnecessary and intend to do away with if they are elected. They also fail to name a single "politically located" road, he said, although the people are entitled to know if the Fusionists know any such roads. Prescott said there never has been a time when Montgomery County has had to borrow money to pay interest, but the legislature had authorized funding of debts this year in the interest of relief of taxpayers from taxes in the depression, the amount this year being $5,000.

In answer to the plank condemning "the police force in politics" he charged Fusionists had promised every police job to someone in return for political support. He declared that the plank advocating deposit of county funds ratably among county banks to show lack of understanding of county financial management. To do this money loaned by a bank would have to be removed and divided among the county banks. He asserted the county has an annual budget and accounts are audited by a certified public accountant and a nationally-known auditing firm.

He declared their advocacy of a bi-partisan school board is too late. The county school board already is bi-partisan. Two dollar tags are absurd, Prescott said, since the reduction in taxes on automobiles would result in loss of the Federal donations to the road systems and the loss of revenue would have to be made up by greatly increased gasoline tax.

He charged that Joseph A. Cantrel, Fusion candidate for the House of Delegates and ace speaker of the Fusion group, has been making charges about the county and citing figures comparing the cst of Montgomery with other counties, and yet had not stepped a foot into the courthouse to look up any of the figures he was citing.

Others who spoke were Roger Whiteford and J. Bond Smith, lawyers; Miss Lavinia Engle, candidate for county commissioner, and James H. Pugh, candidate for State's attorney.

The speakers brought out that prices alleged as fair for construction of roads by John Oxley in a recent addres were less than the cost of a narrow road, that instead of $9,000 a mile, the price should be nearer $3,500 for much of the road work done in the county. Prescott stated the State roads commission had been paid more for construction of roads in the county than the total valuation of roads placed by Oxley. Oxley had declared there was a discrepancy of some $3,000,000 between the money collected for roads and the valuation placed on the roads by a Frederick firm he consulted.

Sunrise in the Suburbs

By Clyde H. DuBose.

Candidates in Montgomery and Prince Georges Counties, who are now talking themselves hoarse and chucking babies under the chin for a seat in the Maryland Legislature, have something to think about besides the election itself.

The ballots November 6 will ask the voters to decide whether the legislators' salaries should be increased. Or, more specifically, it will ask for an amendment to the State constitution to allow the increase.

The Maryland lawmakers now get $5 per working day. This salary goes for State Senators as well as for members of the House of Delegates. The increase would give them $10.

Figured on the basis of the 90 days the Assembly puts in every two years (regular session), the Annapolis contingent works on a salary of $225 a year per man.

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, widow of the former President, was a recent dinner guest at the George Mason Hotel, Alexandria. She and several friends were guests of Bishop Harry St. George Tucker, Bishop of Virginia.

Extortionate.

Selfishness prevailed at the American Legion convention. In spite of President Roosevelt's appeal for consideration of the National welfare above class interests, and in disregard of the counsel of its more responsible leaders, the Legion stooped to indorse another raid upon the Treasury. By this action, at this time, the organization forfeits its right to be listed among the public-spirited groups which are working for National recovery.

The legislative committee which drew up the resolution calling for immediate payment of the veterans' bonus made a laborious but futile attempt to fend off the criticism that will certainly descend upon the Legion for this surrender to venality. Its two chief arguments are that payment of the bonus now would create purchasing power, thus lessening the relief burden, and would "not create an additional debt." Both contentions are palpably misleading.

Veterans already hold a privileged status, as President Roosevelt pointed out in his Roanoke address. It is nonsense to regard this request for $2,000,000,000 out of the Treasury as an aid to relief. As a matter of fact, most of it would go to veterans well established in their professions and occupations. Such an argument for special favors has an unusually false ring when it comes from an organization that boasts of the prosperity of its membership.

The statement that no additional debt would be created by immediate payment of the bonus has no foundation of fact. The adjusted compensation certificates held by former soldiers are not I. O. U's. They are endowment life insurance policies. Payment of their face value at present would involve a much larger total outlay than Congress ever contemplated.

A capstone of absurdity is placed upon the Legion's extortionate demands by the request that interest accrued on bonus loans be canceled and that interest already paid be refunded. The only way in which these certificates can ever attain their face value, without another large draft upon the Treasury, is through the accumulation of the modest premium and interest payments over the next 11 years.

The Next Step.

With the aid of local dairies, Commissioner Allen has struck a direct blow at the familiar dilemma of want in the midst of surplus. It would be easy to exaggerate the practical importance of the arrangement under which surplus milk will be sold to families on relief at 3 cents per quart below the regular price, but its objective is highly commendable. Under careful direction it may help the unemployed as well as milk-producing farmers.

It is a well-known fact that much of the money distributed among the unemployed does not afford a maximum of relief. Often it is spent unwisely. In some cases the unemployed are at the mercy of unscrupulous exploiters. Commissioner Allen's agreement with the milk distributors will not eliminate such abuses, but it does give encouragement to families on relief to provide more milk for their children. If they fail to do so, Commissioner Allen has indicated that milk certificates will be distributed in lieu of cash allowances.

Having worked out this problem, at least on an experimental basis, the Commissioner might well turn his attention to housing for the unemployed. Preliminary surveys indicate that exorbitant rentals are frequently charged for quarters unfit for habitation. One reason why the rates for such accommodations are high is the uncertainty that any rent will be paid. This situation appears to be more difficult than the distribution of surplus milk at reduced rates, but it is equally as important. The savings which might be made, as well as the possible improvement in the living quarters of the unemployed, certainly call for thorough exploration of this field.

A Railroad Opportunity.

Although the railroads have succeeded in effecting great economies in operating costs in recent years, their record in respect to utilization of freight cars has grown steadily worse.

The ratio of empty car mileage to loaded mileage, for instance, rose from 47 per cent in 1920 to 64 per cent in 1933, as a result of what Coordinator Eastman describes as a "competitive rush to shift the burden of car hire." Adequate charges for the use of cars must, however, be made so long as the present system of diversified ownership prevails. It is the most feasible way to prevent a railroad from retaining equipment belonging to other carriers.

If all freight cars were pooled under one central management, the coordinator estimates that the elimination of unnecessary cross hauling of cars and reduction of capital carrying charges would result in an annual saving of $100,000,000. Although the roads have opposed such proposals in the past, the glaring wastes of the present system obviously call for a remedy. If it is not supplied through cooperative efforts on the part of private management the Government will doubtless take the initiative and impose a plan upon the carriers which may not be nearly as much to their liking as that outlined by Coordinator Eastman.

Under the proposed pooling plan the newly formed Association of American Railroads is given an opportunity to show what it can accomplish toward elimination of unnecessary operating costs. If it is willing and able to solve the problem presented by the present ineffective utilization of equipment, it will do much to disarm those critics who insist that such avoidable wastes can only be eliminated by compulsory unification of the railroads.

Where Control Is Needed.

The destructive price cutting that has brought retail quotations for gasoline far below production costs in many parts of the country is primarily due to the breakdown of elaborate plans for controlling production of crude oil.

In the Recovery Act it was provided that the President should have power to prohibit the transportation of oil in interstate and foreign commerce if produced in excess of the amount allowed under State laws or valid regulations. Both the industry and the Government recognized the need for strict regulation of output to prevent recurrent demoralization of the price structure. Nevertheless, the system of control has not functioned effectively and the Federal Government has not succeeded in preventing production of crude oil in excess of the quotas allotted to the several States under the petroleum code.

Adverse court decisions have interfered with the enforcement of restrictions and the States have not supported the authorities as effectively as they might have done. The result has been that crude oil, produced in violation of restriction agreements, has been sold to refiners at prices much below those maintained for quota oil. Gasoline refined from this cheap oil has been offered at prices undercutting those charged by competitors. That in turn has led to offsetting cuts to recapture sales and violation of code marketing agreements not to sell below cost.

The existing demoralization is, of course, not due exclusively to the failure of production control. Retail trade outlets for gasoline have been greatly increased during the depression period in many areas. Consequently, the pressure to expand sales in face of increasing competition can with very slight encouragement degenerate into a destructive form of price cutting.

It is evident, then, that the petroleum industry is in need of regulation for more than one reason. First and foremost, there is a justified feeling that an industry which utilizes precious natural resources ought to be subjected to Governmental regulations designed to prevent wasteful exploitation of the Nation's wealth. Furthermore, failure to accommodate output to changes in demand, as would be the case in most manufacturing industries, is virtually certain to lead to distributive difficulties, with alternating periods of very high and very low prices to consumers.

It is hoped, therefore, that the price war now raging will spur both Federal and State authorities into taking action to check the outflow of superfluous oil and to restore orderly marketing conditions within the industry.

A Community Awakening.

A rising tide of indignation is sweeping over Washington as the result of the recent Takoma Park murder. Civic groups are awakening to the fact that the Capital City has a serious problem on its hands. Movements are going forward on several fronts to break the grip of gangdom and prevent the intrenchment of organized crime in the District. The widespread community interest which these efforts are attracting is the most hopeful indication that they will not be in vain.

There has been a good deal of unwarranted complacency about the enforcement of law in Washington. It may be true that criminal gangs have not found Washington an especially profitable city in which to operate, but some minor rackets have flourished here on a large scale. In recent months the criminal element has become increasingly bold. Such conditions can not be permitted to run unchecked, for there is already ample evidence that the District is becoming a favorite haunt for dangerous racketeers.

Maj. Brown's campaign against gambling is, of course, an important first step toward the general objective. But "constant harassment" is no solution for this racket. Commissioner Hazen has announced the intention of local authorities to seek a more stringent law to cope with underworld activities. Behind these endeavors looms up the public meeting sponsored by the District Bar Association (to be held next Monday) in which civic and religious bodies will join in a community fight against crime.

Campaigns of this sort may mean much or little. As Attorney General Cummings pointed out in his indorsement of the Bar Association's plan at a luncheon yesterday, resolutions, conferences, talk and good intentions do not prevent crime nor bring criminals to justice. Only insofar as these movements give rise to coherent policies of a practical and permanent nature are they of value. Even then a full measure of cooperation by the public is necessary to keep the machinery of law enforcement functioning smoothly.

Coupled with the investigation into our Police Courts, the recent outburst of gang warfare presents a major issue to the citizens as well as to officials of the District. The time for a community-wide war on criminals, of both the major and minor types, has arrived. In taking leadership of this movement the Bar Association has a unique opportunity to earn the further gratitude and respect of Washingtonians.

Bad Diplomacy.

It is unfortunate that the proposed oil monopoly in Manchukuo should be pressed by the Japanese government just as the preliminary naval conversations enter a very delicate stage, for the apparent violations of the Open Door principle, seriously affecting both British and American interests, will probably affect adversely the efforts to find a mutually acceptable formula at London.

Japan's case for an "independent" Manchukuo rests to a large extent upon her reiterated denial of any desire or intention to secure "territorial gains or commercial advantages" in that territory. Incorporated in the Proclamation of Independence of the vassal state is the statement that "Investments by any foreign nation shall be welcomed for the furtherance of trade and exploitation of natural resources, thus bringing the principles of the open door and equal opportunity to a fuller realization."

It now appears that the proposed regulations will have the effect of eliminating non-Japanese distributors and retailers in the Manchurian oil market, a step which could be countenanced neither on legal nor ethical grounds. And feeling on the issue will not be diminished by recent Japanese domestic legislation placing foreign oil companies under obligations to the Japanese government which would seem justified only if war were anticipated.

The naval negotiations at London will require a large measure of conciliation from all parties if they are to reach a successful conclusion. Every indication that Japan's present policy is one of take rather than give will tend to result in a stiffening of opposition to her demand for equality.

Anomalous.

The Department of Commerce reports that the United States received $920,000,000 in gold during the first half of the current year, in settlement of international trade, tourist, and financial accounts. The great volume of gold imports is explained, of course, by stimulus from the devaluation of the dollar. Nevertheless, the result of the half-yearly operations has been a further depletion of the gold resources of other countries and a piling up of superfluous metal in the Treasury's vaults.

Not only did we export $173,000,000 more of goods than we imported during this period, but there was a large net inflow of capital funds. Thus a country to which the rest of the world is heavily indebted, is continuing to pile up favorable trade balances and absorbing more current capital funds than it releases for investment abroad. Under such circumstances, it is not surprising that there should be complaints of a dearth of funds with which to purchase American goods for export.

It has been said many times that foreigners can only pay for what they buy in one of three major ways: By offsetting sales of goods, by shipments of gold, or by obtaining loans which enable them to defer payment. Many debtor countries have no more gold to spare. Yet they are expected to deal with a creditor country that sells more goods than its buys, and currently borrows more capital than it lends.

The record of the past half year is no criterion by which to judge the future course of events. But it does show that so far there are no indications of a corrective adjustment of trade balances that would make it easier for other countries to discharge their obligations to us, and to expand the scale of their purchases.

In Dutch.

Of course, as every schoolboy knows, there is no such place as Holland. It is the Netherlands. And now the government of that delightful land of dykes, bankers, tulips, and the gold standard, has instituted a campaign against the use of "Dutch." It would have all the world refer to its inhabitants, who do not, we believe, wear wooden shoes any more, as Netherlanders. It would seem as if somebody ought to talk to the government like a Netherland uncle about this.

If any land is a land of sturdy, wholesome traditions it is the land of the Dutch. Would they have us talk of the Netherlands school when we speak of Rembrandt, surely one of the great men of all time? He will always be Dutch to us, and no chamber-of-commerce complex on the part of the inhabitants of Amsterdam will change that!

There are undoubtedly many good, official, and dogmatic reasons why Dutch should be dropped, but we hope that sentiment will win over cold logic. As F. P. A. remarked only the other day, we would have to call it "The Netherlands Treat Club," "The Flying Netherlander," and revise "Davy And the Goblin" to read, "The cook was Netherlandish and behaved as such."

But it is doubtful if any plaintive words will hold off the impending campaign. Real estate agents weathered a similar storm of protest and are now realtors. Undertakers stood up against withering scorn for the word mortician. And the Dutch are a tenacious race. They may win out. But if they do we hope the linotypers come through in their usual light-hearted way and always set it up "Neanderthal." That's what Netherlands looks like at a glance, and it does seem a little Neanderthalic to dispose of such a usable and wholesome word as Dutch.

Negroes And The Farm.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The back-to-the-farm movement is relied upon to relieve the congested centers and points of pressure of our large cities. Henry Ford, our greatest industrial seer, advocates the redistribution of population between city and country as the only way out of the deplorable situation in which the country now finds itself. Ten million people are out of employment and one-sixth of the whole population is on the Government relief rolls. No one can foretell the duration of the depression. Upton Sinclair declares that the number now unemployed has reached an irreducible minimum. President Roosevelt files his emphatic dissent from this gloomy forecast. While we all hope that the President has made the better guess, yet there is no immediate or early relief in sight.

This depression bears heavily upon the American people as a whole, but as usual the man at the bottom sustains the heaviest brunt of all. It is estimated that fully one-third of the Negro population in the large cities are on the relief rolls. The black man constitutes the marginal worker and is squeezed out of the equation, or pressed to the lower levels of work and pay. He finds no assured place in city industries. Charity and dole can furnish only temporary relief, but cannot effect a permanent cure. The Government is engaging its best intelligence and projecting the expenditure of billions of dollars to relieve the situation. It might, indeed, well begin at the point where the pressure is greatest—the surplusage of Negro population in the urban centers. There is no likelihood that this surplus will be absorbed in the industries in a self-sustaining way.

The planting of agricultural communities with adequate safeguards and direction is demanded by good sense and sound statesmanship. It is not only the surplus city population that causes keen concern, but the cityward tide of country folk must be stemmed.

During the campaign, Mr. Roosevelt vowed that he would equate industrial and agricultural opportunity. This would tend to keep people on the farm as well as to return them to the farm.

The Real News.

(Ed. Note — Apparently, this correspondent overlooked the extensive news stories and editorial comment which The Post has carried on both the agricultural processing taxes and the Frazier-Lemke Act. The processing tax program was discussed editorially on the following dates: December 3 and 29, 1933; July 25 and August 16, 1934. Editorials on the Frazier-Lemke measure appeared on June 20, July 3 and September 22, 1934.)

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: What is the matter with The Post? What is the matter with the metropolitan press generally? I have been reading The Post regularly for over ten years. I have preferred it, as thus indicated, to the other metropolitan journals because I have considered it the most sane and sensible of those about me, and have considered it the fairest in treating the important news of the day.

Recently, say for the past year or so, I have been dissatisfied with The Post. The reason for my dissatisfaction is that, like the other metropolitan journals, it appears to me that you are sidestepping matters of the most vital importance to the people; that you are omitting news which vitally affects the income and expenditure of every family in the country. How many of your readers know anything about what is now known as "processing" taxes.

A law was passed by the last Congress which has been known as the Frazier-Lemke law, providing for a moratorium on all mortgages. Did your paper ever publish this as news? Did you ever make any editorial comment thereon? This act was the law of the land for months before I knew of its existence.

I understand that Maryland farmers are receiving Government checks for not planting tobacco. "They say" that these farmers, in lieu of tobacco, are planting potatoes on the ground thus vacated. Farmers are also being paid for not planting cotton. A processing tax, I am told, is paid on every bushel of wheat ground, on sugar, cotton and other agricultural products. On these matters I am not absolutely sure as to what is happening. I state what I understand are the facts.

Your paper and the metropolitan press generally give little information on these subjects and practically no comment. Are not these matters vital news to every family in America?

We Didn't Miss It.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial, "The New Tyranny" (October 22), ably presents the great issue of democracy today. But why is it necessary to turn to Gen. Jan Christian Smuts for inspiration on an issue so vital to America?

If distance lends enchantment, a voice from South Africa should be heard above all others in Washington. We should not forget, however, that recently a great American statesman has warned, with equal force and eloquence, of the devitalizing spiritual encroachments of dictatorship and regimentation.

Gen. Smuts sees "a decay of the individual's responsibility and share in the Government, which seems to strike at the roots of human advance."

That is precisely the thesis of Herbert Hoover's stirring new book, "The Challenge to Liberty."

In fact, on page 7, Mr. Hoover echoes Gen. Smuts' alarms with the sentence: "The hope of America and the world is to regenerate liberty, with its responsibilities and its obligations—not to abandon it."

Your editorial goes so far in agreement with this sentiment as to speak of, "The challenge which the situation offers to freedom-loving nations * * *."

Permit me, then, to urge that you turn your eyes from distant Africa long enough to discover in our own country the book which undoubtedly is the most important and historically significant of the year.

It is most distressing to your friends to realize that, for six weeks, The Post could have entirely missed "The Challenge to Liberty."

Note For Gangsters.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Now that the underworld has succeeded in bumping off an innocent man, leaving his wife and children in distress, why don't the gangsters collect among themselves from the immense profits derived from the residents of the District a sum sufficent to provide for the needs of the helpless wife and her three children? When a prominent gangster is taken for a ride, killed from ambush or killed legally, thousands of dollars are provided for his funeral, flowers, casket, &c. Are the gangsters also cheapsters here in the District?

Come on, boys, be good sports.

In Harmony.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As an organization devoted to advancing music in the National Capital, the Burney Club wishes to thank the "new" Washington Post for its policies which made the review of the first concert of the National Symphony Orchestra front page news in your issue of October 22. Your recognition is not only heartening to the orchestra and its supporters, but may be a real force in reaching many who are, as yet, unconvinced of the value of such an organization in the life of the community. For realizing that a music event such as the concert of last Sunday is news as well as the week-end accidents, crimes and the affairs of state, we commend you.

As Others See It

The Human Factor.

Seldom has an inquiry into an important steamship disaster returned a more damning indictment than that contained in the report of the steamship inspectors on the conduct of the Morro Castle's officers and crew and in the charges based upon it. "Negligence" is formally charged against the acting master, two out of the three deck officers, the chief and first assistant engineers. "There appears to have been no organized effort made on the part of the officers to fight and control the fire." The report cites instance after instance in which no action was taken, facilities were left unused, means of saving life were not tried. "There was a complete breakdown of discipline on the ship." The conditions pictured, moreover, reach farther back than the moment of emergency. Fire and boat drills had been "perfunctory." The crew was uninstructed. The failure to set full watches was a violation of law.

Responsibility for such conditions must touch the master who died on the eve of the tragedy as well as the officers who were left to face it. Owners have at least a moral responsibility for the caliber of men to whom they intrust their ships and passengers. Nor can the Steamboat Inspection Service itself escape the fact that it was content to license the men whom it now denounces as grossly incompetent. Each of the three deck officers whom it now places under charges was authorized by it to command passenger vessels of unlimited tonnage.

But when all this has been said, one feels that there is still more to the question. One suspects that the laws, the inspection services, ship operators, ship's officers and the public itself have all alike paid too little attention to the practical problem of organizing a modern passenger ship for emergency. In how many ships has this problem been seriously studied? In how many do they not only have drills and discipline, but the right kind of drills and discipline that will work when it is needed? Ships differ widely in such matters and one must believe that the Morro Castle was not typical; but one also guesses that the whole subject has been too much overlooked in the safety work of the last 12 years. That is why the assignment of naval officers as observers in merchant ships promises to be so valuable an experiment.

The present report brings out a number of interesting new points as to the details of what probably happened. Presumably these will be more fully analyzed in the subsequent report upon the ship. In the meanwhile the accused officers are yet to present their case. But whatever the final determination, and whatever the findings as to the physical aspects of the tragedy, the human preparation for emergency must become a matter of serious thought to every one responsible for the safety of life at sea.

Banking By Heart

Postoffice, Friday.

"It isn't only banking that has changed. Bankers have changed with it."

The man who said so is himself a banker. He is merely in his forties, as to age—merely in his hundred thousands, as to personal fortune—and he was in Washington merely for the A. B. A. convention.

* * *

"I'm still young enough," he continued, "not to think old ways better just because they are old. I recognize that very often manners and methods wear out precisely because they are old, new times and new conditions necessitating new methods and manners. Still, I do think there used to be more of the human element in banking, more heart in bankers and I can't help regretting the loss."

* * *

He crossed his legs under the table—not such an easy feat for him as it used to be—and drew his coffee cup nearer. He is one of those bankers who still prefer a quiet cigar to a hurried cigarette.

"Even if I am a small-town banker," he continued, "I'm now as different from the old-fashioned small-town type as any of these big-time bankers sitting around here. But I succeeded to the presidency of our bank on my father's death, after working under him for ten years, and so I have my father in mind when I talk of the old banking-ways.

* * *

"The town had about 11,000 inhabitants, a silk mill, a lace mill, three rolling mills and a big railroad-yard. We had one National bank doing all the business. We had had a private bank that did some business too long—received deposits after it was insolvent—and sent its officers to jail. So my father, who was a lawyer, thought the town could stand another bank. And he started it.

* * *

"He'd been the kind of lawyer who wouldn't take a case unless he thought it was a just case, or any criminal case unless the accused, if not innocent, would let him plead guilty and try for such amelioration of sentence as seemed right. He was this kind of lawyer: Theatrical troupes were always getting stranded in our town, the manager decamping. The actors would come straight to father, like ants to jam, and he'd advance their fares back to New York. Sometimes he'd eventually recover ten per cent.

"Naturally, he ran his bank somewhat the way he ran his law office.

* * *

"But he didn't just drop into his office at the bank for 15 minutes a day and give the rest of it to his legal work. He gave the afternoon to the law and every morning to the bank.

"The president ran the bank. The cashier was a cashier, not a boss.

"Take the little matter of embezzlements. There was only one during my father's term, but here's the way he managed it:

"A young fellow not long out of high school—married, though, and with two children—had charge of the individual ledgers. He went on vacation. His substitute found a $1,000 shortage and brought the glad news to the president. As soon as he'd verified it, my father said:

"'I've felt for a long time we were underpaying that man. Be sure not a word of this passes our doors.'

"Then my father inquired into the delinquent's habits. They were good. The money'd gone for a long illness of his wife's and an operation on his daughter.

"The cashier asked when the warrant would be sworn out. Father said:

"'We'll let him have his vacation first.'

"Shortly, my father went on a trip. When he came back, he announced to the directors that the clerk needn't be arrested and wouldn't return—had made restitution. They all knew who had really done the restituting; but it wasn't till long after that I found out how somebody had staked the fellow to a small business in Philadelphia, where he'd made good—where not even his own family, who had joined him there, guessed his past fault—and where he finally reimbursed what we called, up our way, the 'restitutor.'

* * *

"That's a detail, though. The main phase of an old-fashioned banking-business in a small town was its small-loan schedule.

"Directors? They were almost always for my father's point of view—and when they weren't, it didn't make any difference.

"A friend'd want a loan. If his security wasn't good enough, the president would personally provide good securities. And his friends weren't simply businessmen, either. They were workingmen and working-women—pretty much everybody in the place.

"The president's office was a sort of financial confessional, with my father as the father-confessor, though a mighty mild one. People flocked to him in their money-troubles: husbands and wives, sometimes young men and their sweethearts. He saved the town more small retail businesses than the town ever guessed—and, if he was a bit of a match-maker, he saved a lot of reputations, too.

* * *

"Such a way of banking would be plain craziness, these days. You'd say it meant ruin. But somehow it didn't ruin us. Perhaps bankers had more heart then only because, then, people were more practically grateful.

"Anyhow, in ten years, we were doing two-thirds of the town's banking-business."

Four Kinds of Man Make a Frenchman

By Andre Vulliet
(Special Correspondence of The Post).

PARIS, Oct. 14 (By mail).—Different though they may have been, the great Frenchmen who died this year are none the less representative of the qualities of their race. Paul Painleve, the great scientist and politician; Marshall Lyautey, the "Empire builder" who made Morocco; Louis Barthou, the literary foreign minister, and, last of all, Raymond Poincare, the savior of the franc. . . . A long list indeed! But was either one of them a typical Frenchman?

In a little book recently published, Wladimir d'Ormesson, a French political writer and a former diplomat, finds no better answer to the question, "What is a Frenchman?" than in the portraits of three Frenchmen whose temperaments, ideals and careers were so dissimilar: Clemenceau, Briand, Poincare: a freelance; an idealist; a jurist.

To the author, these are the three great divisions into which most French people can fit. But Barthou's death, it seems, throws light on a fourth type, that of the brilliant, learned, gallant Frenchman.

• • • •

WHITE-CHINNED Barthou's life was sparkling from its beginning. Born in the Pyrenees, in southern France, in 1862, he started to display his gifts at school where he was top of his class. At law school, for three years in a row, he reaped the six first prizes in the six different exams he had to pass.

At the age of 26, he was the youngest municipal councilor in France, and within a short time became the youngest Republican representative in the Chamber. In 1894, appointed minister of public works, he was the youngest minister in the government. In various departments he was a minister 17 times.

Gifted by nature with an overabundance of qualities, facilities and gallant graces, short, sharp-witted Barthou loved life and life was easy with him. He could embrace every form of activity and be a success. He was always "on the go." Action gave him an opportunity to show his talents—and look young. Almost coquettish about not getting old himself, he wanted to keep up to the standards of beauty and alertness he cherished.

He was one of the few Frenchmen of his generation who never gave up gymnastics. His mind was kept fit, as well. Although a foremost bibliophile, he read and remembered all the books he had. His hobbies were literature and music, and he managed to write authoritatively on Danton, Mirabeau, Lamartine, Victor Hugo.

His dominant side, it seems, was that he was thrilled and spurred by beauty, whether it be a book, a symphony, an art piece or a woman. No doubt, he also regarded the foreign policy of his country as a marvelous construction; an architectural piece of work which he would build according to logical rules of balance and symmetry.

As a veteran statesman, he often smilingly recalled that his premature success as a minister was owed to a big scandal. The Panama affair of 1892 had discredited most of the seasoned politicians. The bright young fellows then were Barthou, Poincare, Deschanel and a few others. This gave them their chance, and Barthou and Poincare made their ministerial "debut" together, Barthou getting the public works and Poincare the public instruction.

Thirty-two and 34 years old, they were the youngest on the government team. They were nicknamed "the two kids." They remained intimate friends until they both died at a few days' interval.

• • • •

UNDER the enormous, convex forehead of Raymond Poincare lay probably a greater mind, but quite of another type.

The brother of one of the foremost mathematicians of all times, there was something rigorously mathematical about him. No fancy, no "imponderables," no laughter. But a master mind, a prodigious memory, an unfailing will power, a sort of puritanical sense of duty and only one love—his country—and one attachment—the Republican regime. They called him "the incorruptible one."

"He was the spiritual son," d'Ormesson wrote, "of that long lineage of administrators and jurists, honest, rough, punctilious, full of pride and conscience, great because of their love of public welfare and petty because of their bent for chicanery, who have built France with their own hands."

Poincare's memory was extravagant. He used to write his speeches, read them once, and hand out the manuscript to the press. He would then deliver them by heart and let the press know if he had made any changes. "My memory disturbs me," Poincare himself would say. Poincare's minute knowledge of laws, precedents and regulations, however, together with his clear conscience of what was constitutional or not, often dried his inspiration.

During his premiership from 1926 to 1929, when he saved the franc at the head of a nonpartisan cabinet, he wore himself out and tired out two shifts of collaborators, working uninterruptedly from 8 a. m. to midnight. He had time for everything. A Swiss, who had been to school with Poincare, once wrote him a letter to express his admiration for what he was doing. Two weeks later, to his great amazement, he received from the French premier a four-page manuscript letter, evoking school-day memories.

Despite his rare gifts and the great things he achieved, many opponents denied him the qualifications of a great man. He could never stir up France's enthusiasm, nor win her undisputed admiration the way Clemenceau did. But no one ever gained her confidence more completely, because France knew he was incorruptible, thrifty, sound and a hard worker.

• • • •

THOSE who say of Poincare, joking, that "he knew everything and understood nothing," usually add that Briand, on the contrary, "knew nothing but understood everything." M. d'Ormesson sees him as the type of the indolent and sort of Bohemian Frenchman who has remained true to the dreams he made when a student. He is a little bit of an artist, disinterested, subtle and has plenty of charm. When old, he will easily turn into a romantic figure. Put in a touch of genius and you will have another Briand.

As to Clemenceau, who "won the war," he was much more complicated. Revolutionary when others were in office, he was authoritarian when in power. Both feudal and a free lancer, a stanch republican and an admirer of Caesar, he was the first of modern dictators. "Democracy?" he once exclaimed. "It means the right for the lice to eat up the lions."

So, those were great Frenchmen in whom France recognizes herself, and yet, they could not possibly have been more different from one another. What was their common trait, if they had any?

It may be found, it seems, in their intense patriotism, in their ability to place their country above all else, which led them to the conviction they always held the truth and were on the right side.

As a witty Englishman once put it, when their country's interest was at stake, it made no difference from which of this trio you were asking a concession. Clemenceau would bluntly answer "No." Poincare would say "No, because . . ." and Briand, more engagingly would say, "Yes, but . . ."

The Once Over

Milk, F. O. B. Detroit.

Henry Ford is producing synthetic milk. He says tests show it to be healthier, cleaner and cheaper than cow's milk. We may soon drive up to pumping stations for milk as well as gas.

• • • •

Henry may live in history as a milkman rather than an automobile manufacturer.

• • • •

He drove the horse off the streets years ago and his chemists have been hard at work trying to get rid of the cow.

• • • •

Their experiments have been successful at last and the world awaits the Model T quart of milk at its doorstep.

• • • •

Quantity production will be assured and the best herd of milch cows in the country will hang its head in shame when the Ford plant announces its first day's capacity production.

• • • •

Henry will presumably turn out his milk in many styles and models, featuring the streamline bottle and making it possible for you to buy your milk in any color.

• • • •

No announcement has been made, but it's practically certain you will be able to turn in an old quart of cream and get an allowance on a new one.

• • • •

General Motors Corporation's reaction has not been noted, but there was a report today that it would meet Hank on his own grounds and give its customers milkshakes in 17 standard and nine de luxe models.

• • • •

• • • •

"Oh, where are you going, my pretty maid?"
"I am going milking, sir," she said.
"May I go with you!" "Yes," said she,
"The milk is ample, F. O. B."

• • • •

Mr. Ford's next move is unknown, but it is understood he hopes to produce fresh country eggs without the aid of the hen.

• • • •

The future looks pretty scrambled. What'll I have? Oh, five gallons of gas, a quart of grade A milk, half a dozen V-eight eggs and you might look at the oil, boy!

Looking Backward.

It was five years ago this week that our best minds were describing it all as a necessary reaction improving the market's technical position.

Prof. Piccard went up in the air ten miles with his wife. And not in an argument over a bridge hand either.

The Aftermath.

ONE of the finer touches to the end of the Revolution, which occurred officially at 9:17 o'clock Wednesday night, was the treatment of Felix Frankfurter. Parenthetically, there is some difference of opinion as to just what time the Revolution ended, but most authorities set it at the time Mr. Roosevelt began the delivery of his speech to the bankers. Some say it should be at the conclusion of the President's speech, but as soon as he began his delivery the press associations flashed the release on his speech, which had been transmitted to the country's newspapers a few hours before.

BARGERON

But to get back to Felix Frankfurter, his treatment is in decided contrast to what might have happened to the Tories had the revolutionists been successful. By many he is, of course, looked upon as the revolutionists' leader.

• • • •

Whether his safety was a condition of Mr. Roosevelt's signing of the pact is not known, but it is a fact that the President kept him at the White House overnight, there in the shelter and security of the place, and let him slip away unnoticed yesterday. Presumably it was deemed best not to take any chances of his falling into the hands of the bankers Wednesday night.

It is understood he is to be given full amnesty with the privilege of going anywhere he pleases. Whether there is involved any promises on his part is not known.

Amnesty, in fact, is to be the general rule. It is to be granted Tugwell, who is to be permitted to come home after the elections or at some earlier time when it is not considered he can cause any trouble. Richberg, of course, ran out on the revolutionists some time ago, presumably when he saw their cause was hopeless. Jim Landis, Ben Cohen, Jerome Frank and the others are to be dealt with in the general good will which attended the close of hostilities.

• • • •

There are, to be sure, critics of this policy. There are those who demand eye for eye, tooth for tooth, who contend (and very likely rightfully) that there would have been no gentle treatment of the Tories had the revolutionists been successful.

But, after all, we are a broad-minded and tolerant people. Perpetuation of the hates and bitterness of the conflict will serve no useful purpose in the long run. The sooner we forget the little unpleasantness, and we should look upon it in retrospect as no more than that, the better off we will be.

Surely we can show the same magnanimity with which Lincoln received the return to the fold of the Southern States.

• • • •

Let us bend our energies now to the clearing away of the wreckage and the restoration of that great Republic which we once had, and which, as I understand it, we all love. Even the revolutionists claim to love it. They were simply like the drunken husband who beats his wife. It is not because he doesn't love her. In his drunkenness he thinks that is the way to show it.

Mr. Winthrop W. Aldrich sets the example which I think we should all follow. Visiting the White House yesterday he reflected no rancor over the past, but instead he breathed a good-will and good-fellowship for all the people. In his bubbling over of good cheer he warmly congratulated the President upon his masterly speech.

Mr. Aldrich's attitude all through the struggle was commendable, however. Even when the Senate committee went after his bank, the Chase National, he didn't seem to get mad. What he did was to thank the committee for its kindly and helpful insistence. That's the spirit we need today. It's the spirit of Bruce Barton and 1929.

Born in Baltimore, he received his education at Rock Hill College, Md., and was appointed to the Army from the District of Columbia as second lieutenant, Thirteenth Infantry, in 1898. Promoted through various grades to colonel in 1921, he was cited twice for gallantry during war service in France. He wears the Distinguished Service Medal and the Silver Star with one oak leaf cluster. At Epinionville, France, he supervised personally the forwarding of ammunition and rations under heavy enemy fire. His second citation occurred in the Meuse-Argonne offensive. Returning to Washington, he served with the Army War College and was transferred in 1920 to the Finance Department. He is on the General Staff eligible list.

Such a large proportion of those who have been pictured by Mr. Robles have asked for the originals that The Washington Post is saving all these drawings to honor the requests of any future members of "The National Gallery."

No End of Books

D. H. Lawrence Rises Phoenix-Like in the Memoirs of His Wife—"Not I, But the Wind . . ."

By Theodore Hall.

LONG as the works of D. H. Lawrence may live, I believe the memory of Lawrence as a human being will outlast them all.

Beside such a collection of his letters as Aldous Huxley made in 1932 (Viking, $5), the correspondence of most other men resembles a wardrobe closet—a suit for Sunday, Monday, Tuesday, and so on, with no man inside. Lawrence's brave, simple, fundamentally honest nature is caught only less well, because more brief, less wide-ranging, in the pages of his wife's memoirs. After everyone else has written about her husband, Frieda Richthofen Lawrence now tells us of their 18 years together. "Not I, But the Wind . . ." (Viking, $2.75), is a book to place side by side with "The Letters of D. H. Lawrence," as a record of a very distinctive, very great man who happened to be a writer.

• • • •

Mrs. Lawrence is a bit given to landscape prettiness in her narrative. But for the 89 unpublished Lawrence letters and poems she includes, for the intimate snap-shot photographs, especially for her quiet but illuminating little anecdotes, we can be whole-heartedly grateful.

"I was very untidy and careless, so he took great pains to make me more orderly. 'Look, put your woolen things in this drawer, in this one your silk clothes, and here your cotton ones.'

"It sounded amusing, so I did it.

"When I said: 'But I like to be like the lilies in the field, who do not spin.'

"'What! Don't they just work hard, those lilies,' was his reply, 'They have to bring up their sap, produce their leaves, flowers, and seeds!' That was that. Later on he aroused my self-respect. 'You can't even make a decent cup of coffee. Any common woman can do lots of things that you can't do.'"

Frieda, you see, was the daughter of a baroness. Also, by the way, the sister of Richthofen, the German war ace.

• • • •

Once Frieda said to him, during their first days together in Italy; "Lorenzo, why can't people live as happily and get as much out of life as we do? Everybody could, with the little money we spend." He replied: "You forget that I'm a genius." But he was half in fun, half serious.

And what, since we all want secrets, was the secret of that happiness? Perhaps Frieda catches it here: "Of his short life didn't Lawrence make the most? It was his deep sense of the reality of living. He knew what feeds the life-flame in a creature; it isn't Rolls-Royces or first-class hotels and cinemas. He wasn't a high-brow and he wasn't a low-brow, but with real genius he got out of the quick of living the abiding values and said so in his writing."

• • • •

Little pictures crowd up. Lawrence rowing out through the surf in the bay where Shelley drowned, and Frieda, "on the shore watching him like a hen that has hatched a duckling," yelling in rage: "If you can't be a real poet, you'll drown like one, anyhow!"

Frieda "falling" for Katherine Mansfield and Middleton Murry when she saw them "quite unexpectedly on the top of a bus, making faces at each other and putting their tongues out."

The Lawrences in war-time Cornwall, sadly mistrusted as German spies—once Frieda ran gayly along the beach, her white scarf waving in the wind. "Stop it, stop it, you fool!" Lawrence cried. "Can't you see they'll think you're signaling to the enemy?"

Desperately poor during this time of hysteria and profiteers, Lawrence wrote to Arnold Bennett: "I hear you think highly of me and my genius, give me some work." Bennett wrote back: "Yes, I do think highly of your genius, but that is no reason I should give you work."

And this little spark in New Mexico between two strong-minded women—"Mabel (Dodge Luhan) came over and told me she didn't think I was the right woman for Lawrence and other things equally upsetting, and I was thoroughly roused and said: 'Try it then yourself, living with a genius; see what it is like and how easy it is; take him if you can.'"

Silver Tongued

By Wm. Lyon Phelps

William Jennings Bryan.

MR. FRANK W. HUBBARD, who was a delegate to the National Democratic Convention in 1896, tells me that the effect of Bryan's "Cross of Gold" speech absolutely baffles description. The vast crowd at the convention was restless and noisy and difficult to manage; but in a moment Bryan had them in the hollow of his hand. The magic of his voice, the impassioned earnestness of his manner, made every one feel that it was a great historical occasion. The silence in the auditorium was so intense that it seemed as if every one were holding his breath; then, when the tremendous climax was reached, there was a moment of awestruck stillness followed by a pandemonium. The audience went into a delirium.

Whatever may be one's political or economic opinions, I think every one must agree that the speech was one of the great dramatic moments in American history; as an example of oratory adapted to time and place, it was a masterpiece. I envy those who were fortunate enough to hear it.

Bryan was 36 years old, having been born in Salem, Ill., March 19, 1860. In 1887 he went to live at Lincoln, Nebr., and from 1891 to 1895 he was in Congress. During those four years his speeches in Congress gave him a National reputation.

Although often defeated for high political office, and although his advocacy of many measure was unsuccessful at the time, his personal popularity knew no diminution. The only time I ever spoke at a Chautuqua meeting was at Richmond, Ind.; and I had a magnificent audience in the big tent, for I was to be followed by William J. Bryan! People had been driving in from the surrounding country since the break of dawn, and they took their places before I began to speak, so that they could hold them in order to hear Bryan. In his speech on that occasion I was impressed by the slowness of his enunciation; every word was clear-cut, so that every person, even on the fringes of the vast throng, could hear it.

In the last few years of his life, I got to know Mr. Bryan very well indeed; his home then was in Miami, Fla.; and I used to go down there in the Christmas vacations. He was one of the most lovable of men, and gave the unmistakable impression of kindness, benevolence and sincerity. It also was a privilege to know Mrs. Bryan, a very remarkable woman; and also their famous daughter, Ruth, now Minister to Denmark.

It was a charming household, happy and serene.

The effect of Bryan's oratory never lost anything with years. On one occasion, late in his career, he came to New Haven to lecture against evolution. An undergraduate, who had never before seen him went out of curiosity. He told me: "Bryan talked two hours and a half. I did not agree with one sentence he uttered; and I was absolutely spellbound."

Profit System Safer As Confidence Gains

New Tolerance May Not Mean Recovery But it Is at Least a Beginning.

By Elliott Thurston.

RECONCILIATION does not mean surrender. Neither orthodox banking nor Mr. Roosevelt has abandoned principles or convictions.

Both have publicly proclaimed their willingness to substitute cooperation for combat. Everything is to be gained, and nothing much that can be saved is lost by this propitious approach to common problems.

Had the animosities which have been provocative of class welfare been continued, the consequences could have been disastrous for the country. Both sides have the common purpose of recovery. Both are agreed that individual enterprise and the private profit system must be preserved. Both want a recovery based upon general principles over which there is no real disagreement. Such a recovery is improbable when banking and business are arrayed irreconcilably on one side and Government on the other. Private enterprise can not thrive, if it can exist, amid the perils and uncertainties of such a battle.

In the counsels on both sides—which made possible the public proclaiming of a changed attitude—statesmanship prevailed over the strong temptations to further recrimination. The motives which prompted both sides to bury the hatchet seem unimportant beside the advantages to the country that may come from more harmony and less hostility.

AS their spokesman, Jackson Reynolds, made it clear that the leaders of the banking community are not blind to the problems and difficulties besetting the President in balancing the budget and stabilizing the dollar. Until now Mr. Roosevelt frequently has had reason to wonder whether his banker and business men critics comprehended the difficulties or, if they did, how they could be so intolerant unless they were moved by sheer partisanship. Mr. Reynolds reflected an understanding and tolerance which have not been pronounced heretofore in public discussion and debate between contending forces in the business and political world.

For his part, Mr. Roosevelt touched—no doubt too lightly to satisfy many—on his objectives of balancing the budget, as the revival of business reduces the burden of relief and of stabilizing "prices and values" as soon as unstable conditions abroad and inflationary demands at home make that possible. He might have been more explicit. But no other meaning can be placed upon his words.

In discussing publicly these two vital subjects—the budget and the dollar—Mr. Roosevelt is perhaps overly cautious. His reasons are not hard to divine. They are the two most sensitive subjects politically. For him to say that he means to cut down, even though money is being squandered and politicians have made a veritable racket of relief, at once stirs up a tremendous political resistance. It is easy to say that the President should defy the spenders, but they are beyond question in a majority in Congress. And the President must be the judge of whether the wiser course is to try to hold these forces in check rather than engage in an uncertain battle against them.

AS for stabilization, that word has been dynamite—powerful enough to send prices tobogganing during the London Economic Conference and to affect them violently at other times. Aside from conditions abroad which make immediate stabilization impossible, a declaration by Mr. Roosevelt that he will stabilize finally and permanently would be sure to arouse the inflationists at home to fresh onslaughts.

If the fact that Mr. Roosevelt has taken his stand in the past for budget-balancing, and stabilization, that he has gone to the mat with Congress on economy, and lost out on one notable occasion last winter, does not make for enough "certainty"—in the face of his recent attitude and overlooking the now discarded toying with the commodity dollar—then bankers and business men are asking for the impossible, in Mr. Roosevelt's opinion.

In any event, without sacrifice of convictions, both sides have now exhibited publicly, a far greater understanding and tolerance than heretofore. That may not be enough to produce the confidence needed to insure recovery, but it is at least a good beginning.

Music Teachers' Group Will Meet on Sunday

A business meeting of the Washington Music Teachers' Association will be held next Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock in the Y. W. C. A. Building, Seventeenth and K streets northwest. At this time the constitution and by-laws of the organization will be presented for adoption.

More than 150 professional musicians and their friends have already joined the association, of which Carl Engel, former chief of the music division of the Library of Congress, is the honorary president. The opportunity to become a charter member has been extended until the date of Sunday's meeting.

Mum Show Opens November 1.

The ninth annual chrysanthemum show of the Takoma Horticultural Club will be held in the Takoma Branch of the Public Library November 1 and 2. It will be open to visitors until 9 p. m. of the last day.

Pre-View of Congress

The political complexion of the next Congress will be Democratic . . . overwhelmingly so. But as to the economic complexion . . . that is another matter. It is definitely uncertain . . . and this uncertainty involves vital questions which penetrate straight to the average citizen's pocketbook.

Will the next Congress be full of wild men? Will President Roosevelt be able to hold the wild men in line? Is the President about to become the bulwark of conservatives against a radical sweep? Those questions are asked repeatedly of any one suspected of even the faintest ability as a political soothsayer . . . and they spring from apprehension.

Eugenie Gray Woodruff, James Struthers Offer Dances There.

By Kay Ware.

Odd bits of entertainment may slip right from underneath your nose if you're not keeping up with things—

Those who make a business of giving you a good time are as nice a set of people as you'll ever meet—

Celebrities drift in and out of our city, and you don't want to miss a glimpse of them—

Enchantment can be found in bright spot lights, in secluded corners, in unobtrusive tea rooms and brilliant cabarets—

"Come and see!"

High spots in this week's Shoreham bill: Eugenie Gray Woodruff (see New York social register) wears her hair brushed forward with a mass of curls on the forehead. Dances with James Struthers, also of social register.

Dinar Kavkaz, of Russian and Persian parentage, dances and sings her tangoes, rhumbas. Particularly good is her "Parlez-Moi d'Amour" and a blues dance, "Black Moonlight," which she created and danced in Bing Crosby's picture, "Too Much Harmony." Toured this spring with Eric Schumann-Heink, son of Ernestine, and his orchestra. Long hair reaches below her waist. Secret ambition: To be "able to play the guitar like fury!" Her name, Dinar, is a Persian coin—gold piece.

More "Moonlight" from the Falla sisters. "Manhattan Moonlight," accompanied with cloudy blue lace and feather gowns. Hard workers, little time for play, practice dances they don't use. Remember the Persian dance in "Voltaire?" They did it.

"Max" Lowe, Shoreham's impresario, was formerly booking agent in Europe for Charles Dillingham; has been with New York's Hippodrome. Counts Irene Castle and Mistinguette, of the "million dollar legs" among his "finds." Is one of the politest men in town.

Tiny fountains light the walls of the Raleigh's dining room. Look closely and you'll see that the stream coming from the gargoyles' mouths isn't water. What is it?

Have you seen the big question marks on the walls in Rausch's back room? And why?

Shows to Select.

Lotus—Lots of dances, team doing waltz and Arabian number, an eccentric and double quick tap; also songs by Judy Ellington.

Did you know that Moe Baer, who will be at Club Habana, is leading Sidney's musicians at the Mayflower? Only for a few days.

Blue seems to predominate in cocktail lounges. It's bright on the walls of the Carleton, glowing in the mirrors at Hi-Hat, and dark and restful at Harrington's Pink Elephant. Incidentally these three are very sleek and modern.

When a drive in the country works up an appetite: Olney Inn, Brooke Farms The House, Normandy Farms, Little Tea House in Alexandria, Collingwood Tea House, Mrs. K's Toll House Tavern. These are only a few.

Ernestine Gardener shares vocal honors with Fenton Froom at the Willard's Bamboo Room. This young lady has been heard at Club Michel and local theaters. Demure smile, pretty eyes and a fine voice.

Particularly to be praised is the Willard's mixologist.

Panorama.

Man and woman reviving a waltz for "old time's sake" when the orchestra plays a rhumba. . . . Young collegiates peppily cavorting through a rhumba while the orchestra plays a waltz. . . . Powder on satin lapels . . . closed eyes and bruised feet. . . . Girl suffering through a duty dance while partner beams and glistens. . . . Homely girl simpering at bored Beau Brummel. . . . Party for debutante who stops on the floor to chit-chat. . . . Man mountain swinging feet and arms to clear the way. . . . Thin-faced aesthetic dipping to tango Argentino. . . . Imported evening gown, bargain basement copy.

Celebrities . . . spot lights searching the crowd . . . applause. . . . Entertainers in wings check up on routine . . . adjust tap shoes. . . . Master of ceremonies and his automatic smile. . . . "The finest, biggest, most stupendous . . ."

Request for the big hand. . . . Dancers, singers, funny men—it's all in a day's work. . . . They must laugh, sometimes, backstage . . . at the public. . . .

Dance music again. Floor, like a magnet, draws the crowd. . . . Man and woman reviving a waltz for "old times sake." . . . Aesthetes dip and glide through an Argentine tango. . . . Duty dance suffers. . . . Whirling arms and legs of man-mountain. . . .

"Let's go. Got to go to work tomorrow."

"Showboat" is all fixed up with ropes and portholes and pilot wheels and everything but the hornpipe. Perhaps someone could be persuaded to supply that if you asked for it. An appetite and half a dollar may be exchanged for a seven-course dinner. Dancing, special features every night.

Frank Hall has a knack of making people happy. Maybe it's the fine food at his restaurant; maybe it's the congenial and homelike atmosphere. If you hanker for mother's cooking, go to Hall's; they try to excel even hers.

It's a pity the tavern next to Jean's is empty. If you peek inside the next time you're passing by, you'll understand how sorrowful it is to have a good thing go to waste.

Rossdhu Castle's Oscar plays upon a garden hose! He's cut holes in it, fastened a mouthpiece on one end and it really makes music. But, aside from being musical, his act is genuinely funny. The things he can do with that garden hose!

Saturday night dancing now, a big Halloween party and after that dancing on Saturday and Wednesday nights. Special evening or afternoon parties arranged by reservation.

Coal Operators Open Sessions In City Today

Laws Proposed Affecting Bituminous Industry to Be Discussed.

Representing virtually 80 per cent of the commercial tonnage of the industry, several hundred bituminous coal operators from every producing field in the Nation will open the fifteenth annual meeting of the National Coal Association at the Mayflower Hotel today.

Consideration for the future of the NRA and the various legislative proposals affecting the industry will demand most of the attention of the delegates. Advance announcements yesterday described the convention as one "at which the course of the bituminous coal industry will be charted."

Reports from the association's Government relations committee, headed by Charles O'Neill, vice president of Peale, Peacock & Kerr, Inc., of New York City, and from the association's special legislative committee, headed by J. D. A. Morrow, president of the Pittsburgh Coal Co., will be features of the meetings.

Forney Johnson, of Birmingham, Ala., counsel for the Alabama operators in the suits against the TVA which have been instituted in recent months in Alabama and Tennessee challenging the right of TVA to engage in local utility operation, will be the speaker at the annual dinner which will be held tonight in the Mayflower Hotel. George B. Harrington, president of the Chicago, Wilmington & Franklin Coal Co., of Chicago, will act as toastmaster.

The report of the organization committee of Bituminous Coal Research, Inc., a cooperative organization set up to stimulate and coordinate research activity, will be presented by the chairman, John C. Cosgrove, of Johnstown, Pa.

The National Coal Credit Corporation, organized within the industry as a clearing house for credit information, will report through W. J. Magee, of Cincinnati, its president, and C. B. Huntress, president of the Appalachian Coals, Inc., pioneer sales agency within the industry, will address the meeting and describe the work of his agency.

C. E. Bockus, of New York City, is president of the National Coal Association; W. D. Ord, of Landgraff, W. Va., is treasurer, and J. D. Battle, of Washington, is executive secretary.

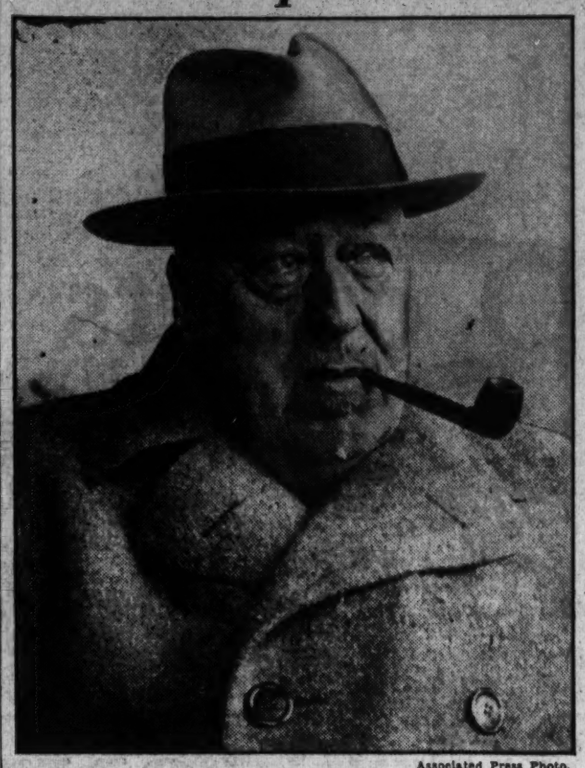
Eckener Visions D. C. As Airship Terminus



DR. HUGO ECKENER. Associated Press Photo.

Washington will be the terminus of a Berlin-to-America airship line if Dr. Hugo Eckener, the German Zeppelin navigator, has his way.

The veteran airman, commander of the Graf Zeppelin during its round-the-world flight in 1929, was in the Capital yesterday to negotiate with Government officials for the temporary use of existing airship mooring facilities on the East Coast for a series of North Atlantic flights which Dr. Eckener hopes will demonstrate the practicability of operating a transoceanic lighter-than-air service on regular schedules.

Dr. Eckener is still "sold" on Washington as a transatlantic air terminus, he said, and with an improvement in business conditions he believes a commercial airship terminal will be built within a half hour's auto drive of the Capital.

Consider Hybla Valley.

When the Zeppelin command last was in Washington, he revealed plans for locating the air terminal in the Hybla Valley of Virginia. Backers of the proposed North Atlantic airship line are still considering the site, he said, but added it was possible the terminal would be located somewhere between Washington and Baltimore.

Dr. Eckener declared the enthusiasm in United States financial centers aroused by the 1929 flight never has completely died out, and that American capital for the airline will be available as soon as world business conditions improve.

He said he would negotiate with Navy and Commerce Department officials for use of hangar facilities at Lakehurst or Cape May for demonstration purposes.

"There are still a few skeptics who have to be shown," he said.

Testifies Here Monday.

Dr. Eckener will appear Monday as an expert lighter-than-air witness before the Howell commission studying United States air development.

He described the loss of the Navy dirigible Akron as "extremely unfortunate," and said he was not convinced that the airship Macon, successor to the Akron, developed structural weaknesses during fleet maneuvers last summer as rumored.

He viewed the recent London-to-Melbourne air race as a "remarkable feat," demonstrating "unbelievable" endurance on the part of the men who flew the ships and the reliability of American commercial planes.

U. S. Protests Japan's Move To Control Oil

here, there are two trouble zones growing out of Japan's efforts to get control of oil, one in Manchukuo and one in Japan. Some time ago the Manchukuo regime served notice on American, British and Dutch oil companies doing business in that country that it intended to establish a corporation with a monopoly on the refining and distribution of oil.

Dispatches from Tokyo are to the effect that the South Manchuria Railroad, 50 per cent of which is owned by the Japanese government, would hold 40 per cent of the stock of the oil monopoly. It is not clear here what disposition would be made of the remainder of the company's stock, but it is held that the corporate set-up will favor the Japanese.

This is supported by an Associated Press dispatch from Tokyo, which reported that Keizaburo Hashimoto, president of the new company, also is head of the Nippon Oil Co., and is a brother-in-law of the Japanese Ambassador to Manchukuo, who also is the Japanese army commander in Manchuria. The army is the supreme Japanese authority in Manchuria.

Grew Makes Protest.

Joseph C. Grew, American Ambassador to Japan, has made representations to the Tokyo government, pointing out that such a set-up will seriously damage the Standard Oil Co. of New York, the Texas Oil Co. and other American concerns and that the result would be to favor Japanese oil interests.

This, Mr. Grew is understood to have pointed out to the Japanese, raises the question of whether the oil monopoly violates the principle of the "open door" and equal opportunity for all foreign interests in Manchuria. He also has pointed out that the nine-power pact, signed at Washington in 1922, contains a pledge of equality of treatment for nationals of all countries in China.

The purely Japanese aspect of the matter is based on the passage of legislation which became effective on July 1, requiring all foreign oil companies to apply for licenses from the Tokyo government.

Conditions Dictated.

As a condition for the government granting the license, the companies must agree to build up their oil stocks in Japan to the equivalent of six months' supply. This oil must be stored at the expense of the oil companies. Construction of the tanks needed would cost American companies several millions of dollars, it is reported.

The foreign companies must also agree to sell their oil stocks to the Japanese government in case of an emergency at the current price, but the government reserves the right to fix oil prices as well as to place foreign companies under an import-quota system.

American oil companies, as well as Dutch and British enterprises, contend that these regulations make it difficult, if not impossible, to carry on business in Japan. Their views have been laid before the Japanese foreign office by Mr. Grew, but there is no question of treaty rights involved in this situation.

State Recovery Ticket Ruled Out in N. Y.

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 25 (AP).—A Supreme Court justice late today ruled the State ticket of the Recovery Party off the official ballot for the November 6 election.

Supreme Court Justice Gilbert V. Schenck held petitions nominating former Mayor John F. Hylan, of New York, for Governor and candidates for six other State offices "insufficient as a matter of law and fact to effect a nomination." The party's candidates in New York City were not involved.

$30,000 School Fire Blamed on Boy, 8

Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 25 (AP). Eight-year-old Gordon Seif today confessed, authorities said, to starting the $30,000 fire at the Victor L. Berger School here Monday, endangering the lives of 625 children.

William Greenwald, deputy State fire marshal, said the lad, a second grade pupil, told how, with a pocketful of matches, he started the fire in a cloak room and two others in a basement washroom.

Armed Force Is Set to Fight Floyd's Pals

Lisbon, Ohio, Oct. 25 (AP).—Police and deputized riflemen throughout Columbiana County continued to stand guard tonight against a possible invasion by henchmen of Adam Richetti and his slain pal, Charles (Pretty Boy) Floyd.

Authorities said they were taking precautions not only against an attempt to free Richetti from the old county jail here, but also to protect those who aided in the apprehension of the notorious outlaws.

Ten marksmen with repeating rifles covered approaches to the jail. Sheriff Frank Ballantine said they will remain on duty until officers from Columbia, Mo., arrive with papers for Richetti's removal thence to face murder charges.

Department of Justice agents, who were refused custody of Richetti when they sought him for the Union Station massacre at Kansas City, also have not withdrawn completely from the territory.

At least two Federal operatives remained in East Liverpool tonight. It was reported that they were continuing to investigate a theory that accomplices of Floyd and Richetti had accompanied them to Ohio.

Police Chief John H. Fultz, of Wellsville, who also is investigating this angle, said he believed one or more accomplices may have left Floyd and Richetti along the Ohio River bank here, while they drove the gang's car away on some mission.

Coroner E. R. Sturgis, after questioning 11 witnesses at an inquest into Floyd's death, returned a verdict of justifiable homicide.

Maj. L. M. Means, of Missouri State highway patrol, is expected here tomorrow to arrange to return Richetti to Columbia. Unless Richetti waives extradition it will be necessary for the Missouri official to go to Columbus to have Gov. George White issue extradition papers.

What Today Means

"Scorpio."

IF OCTOBER 26 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:15 a. m. to 12:15 p. m., from 2:15 to 4:15 p. m. and from 7:15 to 9:15 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:15 to 9:15 a. m., from 12:15 to 2:15 p. m. and from 4:15 to 6:15 p. m.

On this October 26 a friend may be instrumental in your obtaining a satisfactory solution to a rather bothersome problem.

Monetary matters may be successfully negotiated, providing details have been clearly and precisely prepared before an interview takes place. It may save trouble if you will confirm any verbal statement or quotation in writing. Social activities may prove the medium through which you might possibly advance your interests greatly in either a business or social way. Married and engaged couples, as well as those seeking a mate, will prevent jealousy and anger if they are careful not to be overattentive to someone to whom they may be introduced by the one they really love.

If a woman and October 26 is your birthday, you may have the habit of being too frank. Telling people plainly what you think of their weaknesses or faults is never appreciated and is likely to be resented. You will gain in popularity and make better strides on the road to success, both in social and business life, if you are diplomatic in the way of expressing your opinion. You possess a great deal of originality and have the ability of doing things in an unusual as well as artistic manner. You should prove skillful with pen, brush or needle. With proper training you should be able to secure a recognized position in the musical world.

If a man and October 26 is your natal day, you will probably be eminently successful if you do not argue too much with your business associates. You have an inventive mind, and logical reasoning powers. Work of a mechanical or scientific nature should prove a lucrative field for you. You should obtain a great deal of happiness through married life.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE— WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and at." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute. 25c at drug stores. © 1934 C. M. Co.

4,368,000 quarts

That's what we sacrifice to make FOUR ROSES & PAUL JONES America's finest whiskies

4,368,000 quarts! That's a lot of whiskey.

And that's what Frankfort Distilleries sacrifice every year to give Four Roses and Paul Jones the superb aroma and full-bodied, hearty flavor that have always been demanded by Americans who know their whiskey.

This is why we make that sacrifice.

Made in the old-fashioned way

There are many ways to make whiskey. But Frankfort Distilleries know from four generations of experience that there is only one way that truly great whiskey can be made. This is by the costly, old-fashioned method of allowing grain to ferment slowly, naturally.

In using this method, Frankfort loses the millions of quarts of whiskey every year that it could get by using some other process. But Frankfort is interested in making the best whiskey, not the most whiskey. And Frankfort knows that only by this sacrifice can it give Four Roses and Paul Jones the superior flavor that has made these fine old brands such outstanding favorites with the American people.

Kentucky for Bourbon— Maryland for Rye

You can make whiskey anywhere—but not whiskey like Four Roses and Paul Jones. Frankfort Distilleries make these, and all their other whiskies, in Kentucky and Maryland. Because there—and only there—can you find the limestone water that is necessary to give whiskey the full-bodied richness it should have.

Frankfort Distilleries age all their whiskies naturally in charred oak barrels in U. S. bonded warehouses under the most rigid government supervision in the world. And Four Roses and Paul Jones are all straight whiskies—all fine, mellow, Kentucky and Maryland whiskies.

Make this test yourself!

Test Four Roses and Paul Jones against any other whiskey. Test them straight for bouquet and flavor—and discover how much richer, how much more fragrant these fine American whiskies are. And be sure to try Four Roses and Paul Jones in mixed drinks. Then you'll know how marvelous these American drinks can be when they're made the only way they were intended to be made—with fine, old-fashioned American whiskey!

We take no chances on anyone tampering with the quality and purity of Four Roses and Paul Jones. They reach you sealed in the patented tin-top-and-bottom Frankfort Pack that must be destroyed before the bottle within it can be removed. No substitution or adulteration is possible.

Science Clocks Nebula, 24,400 Miles a Second

Pasadena, Calif., Oct. 25 (AP).—Milton L. Humason, astronomer of the Carnegie Institution's Mount Wilson Observatory, announced today he had measured a nebula which had an apparent velocity of 24,400 miles a second, or more than one-eighth the speed of light itself.

The measurement, made with the giant 100-inch telescope, gives support to the "expanding universe" theories of De Sitter, Einstein and Le Maitre, Mr. Humason said.

Hikers to Follow Goose Creek To Famous Tap Rock Quarry

Up scenic Goose Creek to the famous Tap Rock Quarry will be the scene of the trek of the Wanderbird Hiking Club Sunday. At the destination, the hikers will make a collection of interesting minerals.

The quarry, from which the material for railroad beds is taken, still is in use after many decades of operation. Among the more interesting minerals to be found are mountain leather, a showy mineral bearing incrustations of asbestos; zeolites, rocks containing aluminum and silica and prehnite, a pea-green crystalline stone.

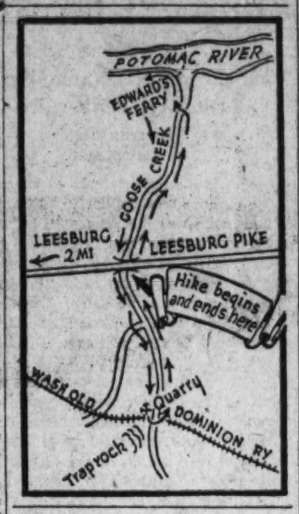
Two jumps—a short one of about 4 miles and a long one of about 8—both including a visit to the quarry, are planned.

Buses will leave The Washington Post Building at 9:30 a. m. for the 33-mile ride along the Leesburg pike. Round trip fare is 70 cents. Readers of The Washington Post and club members planning to go on the trip must telephone in reservations (NA 4200) by 11 p. m. Saturday.

Hikers will leave the buses at Goose Creek, 2 miles below Leesburg, and follow the trail on the north bank of the creek for 2 miles to the quarry. They will lunch in the shadow of the rock excavations and cutting machinery.

Crossing Goose Creek, the group will follow the south bank for 4 miles to Edwards Ferry, on the Potomac River.

After a short stop on the shore of the Potomac, the group will retrace steps along Goose Creek to the pike, where buses await the return trip. They will return to Washington about 6:30 p. m.



New Homes Multiply For Orphaned Babies

Chicago, October 25 (AP).—Add prosperity notes:

Out at St. Vincent's Orphanage adoptions are picking up rapidly, said Miss Bernadine Healy, director of the orphanage, today:

"It certainly is a sign of prosperity. We found 18 homes for babies in the last month and a surefire sign is that we had eight 'repeaters'—families who already had adopted one child and want another."

New Deal Pours $195,500,000 Into Virginia

Half the Amount Spent on PWA Projects in State.

The New Deal has poured into Virginia $195,500,000, the Democratic National Committee announced yesterday in a campaign memorandum, reported by the Associated Press. Nearly half of this amount was charged to the account of Federal PWA projects. The document also said that an increase in tax collections during the fiscal year ended last June 30, compared with the year before indicated "better business in all directions."

Besides PWA grants to Federal projects totaling $89,037,028, the committee said, PWA has made loans and grants to non-Federal projects in Virginia aggregating $9,596,995. Federal relief allotments to Virginia, the committee reported, amounted to $8,786,264 over and above the Civil Works Program that cost $11,923,000. The total investment in CCC Camps in Virginia, it said, was $18,823,534.

Home Owners Loan Corporation loans to August 31, totaled $18,571,621 and those by the Farm Credit Administration were $15,947,336. The RFC lent $11,693,000 on preferred stock and debentures, $4,979,600 to receivers and conservators of closed banks, $1,055,500 directly to business and $3,495,304 for relief purposes.

The Subsistance Homestead Project in the Shenandoah Park area would cost $310,000, the committee said.

Mrs. Vanderbilt Starts Defense; Nurse With Her

New York, Oct. 25 (AP).—Mrs. Gloria Morgan Vanderbilt today began her defense against the charges by Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, her sister-in-law, that she is not a fit mother for her 10-year-old daughter, Gloria, heiress to millions.

She began it, however, under the handicap of illness. With a trained nurse accompanying her, she went home at noon from the Supreme Court room where the legal battle for the custody of the child is being fought. She looked worn and pale.

Mrs. Vanderbilt's first witness—Lawrence Copley Thaw—occupied the stand only a few minutes. Then came her twin sister—the former Lady Furness—who hurried from Paris to testify for her.

In the courtroom, barred to press and public, Lady Furness was still telling her story when court was adjourned for the day.

Red Cross Officers Withdraw Resignations

The four officers of the Silver Spring Branch of the American Red Cross who resigned last week reconsidered yesterday at the request of the executive committee and assumed active direction of the annual roll call, scheduled from November 11 to 29.

The executive committee pledged the organization to renewed interest and activity, and took notice of the offer of the Silver Spring Lions Club to assist the Red Cross in the drive for members.

Two Brothers Confess Plot to Defraud Priest

To Be Sentenced Soon for Cheating Cleric in Forest Glen.

Pleading guilty to a charge of conspiring to defraud the Rev. Charles O. Rosensteel, 80-year-old rector of historic St. John's Catholic Church, Forest Glen, Md., two brothers, Richard J. and Charles Brinker, will be brought before Justice Oscar Luhring for sentence next week.

Justice Luhring deferred sentence yesterday to permit Amos A. Steele, probation officer, to make a report.

A third person named in the indictment, Miss Elsie A. Cannon, an attorney, was exonerated shortly after the brothers entered their pleas when Assistant United States Attorney John R. Fitzpatrick informed Justice Luhring the Government would drop the charge against her.

Father Rosensteel, who will celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of his ordination next month, engaged the Brinkers to do some repair work on his church two years ago. The work was done, and after a series of conferences between the brothers and Father Rosensteel, that lasted over a two-year period, they were paid $24,000, which represented the priest's life savings.

The Government contended the work could have been done for $1,600. The priest was induced, the Government said, to pay large sums of money because of the presentation to him of bills for labor and material that allegedly had never been furnished.

The Hecht Co.
F Street at Seventh

He actually gets paid for it!

Yes, sir. Nelson B. Bell has nerve enough to walk up to the cashier's cage down here at The Washington Post and collect a salary for seeing all the new shows . . . meeting all the stage stars . . . and writing about them for your entertainment and instruction.

You pay out good money to like a show, but it's different with our Nelson. He is the dramatic critic of The Washington Post and (according to at least one aggrieved actor) he gets paid for going to a show and then disliking it! But he doesn't dislike them all; who could, with the grand new stage shows and the swell movies Washingtonians are seeing these days?

You can easily recognize Nelson at the openings of the plays at the National or Belasco theater, or the movie palaces on F street. Nelson is the worried little man in the fourth row, nervously taking notes on his cuff. The reason for his worry is that he knows that he must write his review before the deadline and he is afraid he won't be able to read his notes. But he shouldn't worry; his brilliant reviews are the talk of the town, and they are accepted by playgoers-who-know as the last word on what to see . . . and what not to see.

On second thought, Nelson, the dean of Washington dramatic critics, is worth that pay envelope each week. He knows the theater from the signs under the marquee to the last backdrop . . . from the stage stars to the stage hands . . . and from the best hit to the worst flop. He knows about the new shows scheduled to play in Washington theaters, the new movies soon to be shown on local screens, and he knows how to get and write the intimate news of the theatrical world which is necessary for Washingtonians to know. At the Earle or Fox theaters they'll tell you that the chorus girls' breakfast is a cup of coffee, a cigarette and Nelson B. Bell's column. He's that necessary to members of the profession . . . and to the public.

Before choosing a show to see with your wife . . . or your best girl . . . or your mother-in-law, consult Nelson B. Bell. Then you can know which attraction will please your wife . . . thrill your best girl . . . or annoy your mother-in-law. Look for Nelson B. Bell's by-line each day in

The Washington Post.

Many Notables Attend Justice Unit Dedication

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

The dedication ceremonies of the building for the Department of Justice of the United States held yesterday afternoon in the spacious quadrangle of the structure were not only impressive and interesting, but the section reserved for official guests was very much like a scene taken from a social gathering.

The vast quadrangle, with an elevated ramp which rises over the center drive, was hung with American flags and those of the various States. Balustrades leading to the official platform were banked with huge baskets of yellow and bronze chrysanthemums, pink and salmon gladioli, palms, ferns and one huge basket directly under the speakers stand of scarlet gladioli, bronze chrysanthemums and yellow pom-poms.

The United States Navy Band, resplendant in uniforms, played a program of stirring music as the thousands of spectators and guests assembled. When the others had been seated, the band announced the arrival of the President with his own march, "Hail to the Chief," and shortly thereafter the Solicitor General, Mr. J. Crawford Biggs, introduced Mr. Scott M. Loftin, of Florida, president of the American Bar Association. Mr. Biggs then introduced the Attorney General, Mr. Homer S. Cummings, who delivered an address in behalf of the Department of Justice, touching briefly on the history of the department and the inadequate quarters it has occupied until now.

On Speakers' Platform.

On the speakers' platform were members of the Supreme Court of the United States, members of the Cabinet and a small group of guests, among them the former Attorney General and Mrs. A. Mitchell Palmer. Mrs. Palmer, the delightful "Peggy" to her many friends, wore a gown of black satin crepe with a wide-brimmed black hat, which she frequently affects, and a scarf of silver fox. Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes, wife of the Chief Justice, was in a black ensemble with sable furs, and a brimmed hat of dark rust-colored velvet. Mrs. Harlan Fisk Stone, wife of Associate Justice Stone, was the only other lady of the Supreme Court glimpsed, though all the Justices were present. She wore an ensemble of black trimmed with Persian lamb and a hat to match.

Mrs. J. Crawford Biggs was in a suit of dark brown velvet with a hat to match and a stole of sables. Also on the platform were Mrs. George H. Dean, wife of the Secretary of War, wearing a costume of marine blue trimmed with black galyak, and a black hat, with her daughter, Mrs. Harry Baxter, who wore a suit of wine-colored veleteen with a hat to match; the Postmaster General, Mr. James A. Farley; the Secretary of Commerce, Mr. Daniel C. Roper, and Mr. Marvin H. McIntyre, secretary to the President.

Mrs. Cummings chose to sit in the reserved section with a group of guests which included Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Kremer, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Dawson, Mr. and Mrs. Spruille Braden, of New York, who are spending a few days in town, and Mr. Raymond T. Baker. Mrs. Cummings wore an ensemble of black satin with a small high-crowned toque to match.

District Notables.

Nearby sat the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, Mr. Alfred A. Wheat, with the associate justices of that court; the District Attorney and Mrs. Leslie Garnett, the latter wearing a black woolen ensemble trimmed with black and white printed crepe, and the members of the diplomatic corps.

Among those were the Ambassador of Great Britain, Sir Ronald Lindsay, preceding the other members of the corps; the Ambassador of Italy, Signor Augusto Rosso, seating himself beside the tall dean of the corps; the Minister of of Greece with Mme. Simopoulos, who wore a black crepe frock with a bright red suede belt, a black felt beret and a cross fox scarf; the Minister of Sweden and Mme. Bostrom, the latter wearing a gown of mocha brown crepe with trimmings of turquoise velvet and a large soft beret of matching velvet; the new Minister of Egypt, Ibrahim Ratib Bey, with Mme. Ratib, who yesterday made her first official appearance. She wore a coat of maroon-colored cut velveteen, with a high-crowned felt hat trimmed with a dull gold buckle of the same shade; the Minister of Hungary and Mme. Pelenyi, the latter in a suit of black broadcloth trimmed with ermine and a small black hat.

Diplomats Attending.

Also glimpsed were the Minister of Siam and Princess Damras, the latter wearing brown; the Minister of the Irish Free States and Mrs. Michael MacWhite; the Minister of the Union of South Africa and Mrs. Ralph Close, and the Minister of China, Dr. Sao-Ke Alfred Sze.

Also present were the Charge d'Affaires of Czechoslovakia, Dr. Josef Nemecek; the Charge d'Affaires of Lithuania, Dr. Mikas Bagdonas; the Counselor of the Polish Embassy, Mr. Wladyslas Sokolowski; the Minister of Denmark, Mr. Otto Wadsted; the Minister of Panama, Senor Dr. Don Ricardo Alfaro, and the Minister of Guatemala, Senor Dr. Don Adrain Recinos.

Mr. and Mrs. Wade H. Ellis were also present, the latter wearing a coat of navy blue with a hat to match; Justice Lawrence Groner and Justice William Hitz, of the District Court of Appeals; the former Assistant Attorney General and Mrs. Seth Richardson; Mr. Ernest Van Fossan, of the Board of Tax Appeals, with Mrs. Van Fossan and Miss Eleanor Preston.

Harriet Atwell Becomes Bride Of Blackistone

Chevy Chase All Saints' Church Is Decorated for Ceremony.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a gown of white satin, made with a high, softly draped neckline, tight-fitting sleeves that ended in points at the wrists, and a flaring skirt that terminated in a graceful fan-shaped train. Mrs. Louis Malkus was matron of honor. She wore a gown of gold satin made with a high neckline and long sleeves, shirred at the wrist. Her skirt, which was slit in the front, ended in a brief train. Her small hat of ribbon was of a matching shade. She carried a bouquet of bronze chrysanthemums and pom-poms tied with bronze ribbon.

Miss Catherine Fox, of Fairfax, Va., was the maid of honor. Her gown, made on the same style as that of the matron of honor, was of caracul satin, her small hat was of a matching shade of ribbon and she carried an arm bouquet of bronze chrysanthemums.

The bridesmaids were Miss Mary Louise Atwell, cousin of the bride, of Zanesville, Ohio; Miss Margaret Blackistone, sister of the bridegroom, and Miss Helen Hughes. Their gowns and hats, of the same style as those worn by the other attendants, were of autumn woods, russet and brown satin, respectively. They carried bouquets of yellow chrysanthemums and bronze pom-poms.

The best man was Mr. T. Hatch Dent, cousin of the bridegroom, and the ushers were Mr. John F. Royce, Mr. Leslie Gillis, jr., Mr. John H. Dent, another cousin of the bridegroom; Mr. Louis Malkus and Mr. John A. Milburn, of Media, Pa.

After the ceremony there was a reception at the Brook Farm. Mrs. Atwell wore a gown of black velvet and a corsage of orchids. Mrs. Blackistone, mother of the bridegroom, was in black crepe trimmed with bands of rhinestones and brillants, and had a shoulder corsage of orchids.

PILLAR to POST

"COME, MEET a grandmother who looks like a debutante," somebody said at Mrs. Neitah King's party for the buds of this season not long ago. And after the introduction, Mrs. William J. Bulow, wife of the Senator from South Dakota, smilingly admitted, or rather boasted, that she had five grandchildren. In regal wine velvet, with a silver chain inclosing the material high about her neck, the fact that she was a grandmother seemed incredible. It was quite apparent however, that Mrs. Bulow is not the type of person who would try to conceal her age. She is as open as the wide spaces of her native State, frank, generous and sincere. A conversation disclosed that she finds it difficult to accustom herself to the reserve of most Washingtonians, after living all of her life in a sparsely settled State where even the veritable stranger is more often than not, loudly hailed and enthusiastically welcomed.

• • • •

Although she realizes that if Washingtonians took the same attitude all of their time would be taken up in welcoming strangers, the training of a lifetime causes her to have lapses when she forgets why this should be so. For 13 years before she married the Senator she owned a millinery shop, where she learned to meet the public with the greatest ease. After she married, this ability to make friends became a valuable political asset to her husband and she accompanied him on most of his campaigns, where she "learned to know practically everyone in the State."

• • • •

SHE loves to take long walks, and it is her daily practice to walk from her apartment in Stoneleigh Court through Lafayette Square downtown. Upon one of her first visits to the park she stopped to admire the pigeons clustered about people feeding them. It was amazing to her how tame they were, lighting on people's shoulders and coming up to take morsels of food right out of their hands. Fascinated, she sat down upon a bench to watch them. Seated next to her was a young woman who might have been a Government clerk. The Senator's wife smiled at her bench companion and said, "I do wish one of the pigeons would light on me."

The young person gave her a cold stare, said nothing in reply and turned her glance severely away. Mrs. Bulow told herself to remember that she was in Washington now and not in South Dakota, where talking to strangers was not considered a symptom of the simple-minded.

"She got up finally and walked away as if she really feared that I was crazy," laughed Mrs. Bulow, "and then it was as if the pigeons had heard me and seen me snubbed, for about 25 of them came and settled all over me."

Fentriss Kuhn Is Married in Jersey Church

The 13 bugaboo carries no weight with Miss Mary Rutherfurd Pierrepont, who was the thirteenth in her family to wear the beautiful veil of Belgian lace worn by several generations of brides in her family, when she became Mrs. Fentriss Hill Kuhn in St. Luke's Protestant Episcopal Church at Peapack-Gladstone, N. J., yesterday.

The wedding was one of the important social events of the season and the little church, where the rector, the Rev. John Mitchell Harper, read the service at 3 o'clock, attracted a brilliant throng, who later motored to Peapacton, the country home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. Stuyvesant Pierrepont, at Far Hills, for the reception.

The Rev. Dr. Samuel S. Drury, of St. Paul's School, where the bridegroom prepared for Yale, was to have given the blessing, but at the last moment was detained elsewhere.

Ceremony Is Simple.

Simplicity marked the ceremony, which was performed in a setting of white and green, the illumination almost entirely by candles, many of which were placed on the altar and throughout the body of the church. At the Pierrepont home, autumn foliage and the season's flowers, with flame and yellow, accenting the colors of the bridesmaid's costumes, predominated.

Miss Pierrepont's gown of white satin followed the traditional princess lines, and was finished with a high cowl neck. The sleeves were long and the skirt fell into a long train. Instead of the usual bouquet, the bride carried a white prayer book.

Miss Molly Flagg, the daughter of Mrs. Harold Fowler, of Middlebrook, Far Hills, who is abroad, was unable to return for the ceremony, and Miss Priscilla B. Bliss, the daughter of Mrs. Walter Phelps Bliss, who was among the bridesmaids, took her place as maid of of honor.

Because of the death of her grandmother, Mrs. Henry Phipps, there were one or two other changes in the wedding party. Miss Audrey Phipps, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Carnegie Phipps, who was to have been a bridesmaid, was replaced by the bridegroom's sister, Mrs. Robert G. Hooker, jr., of San Francisco. Other members of the bridal party were Mrs. Hovey C. Clark, the former Miss Aline W. Macy, who was matron of honor; Miss Alice Rutherford, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Winthrop Rutherford, of Aiken, S. C.; Miss Ruth T. Poor, Mrs. Henry V. Poor's daughter, and Mrs. James Lawrence, the former Miss Barbara R. Childs.

Yellow Crepe Frocks Worn.

Miss Bliss and Mrs. Clark were attired alike in flame-colored crepe dresses, made with short, square trains and short capes, and their bouquets were chrysanthemums of a similar shade. The other bridal attendants wore yellow crepe frocks of the same design and carried arm bouquets of yellow chrysanthemums. All wore picture hats of brown velvet.

Mr. William S. Kuhn, jr., was best man for his brother, and the ushers were Messrs. Charles Tracy Barnes, Marshall J. Dodge, jr., Alanson J. Donald, Montgomery Hare, John Drum, jr., Garrard W. Glenn, John Sherban, of South Euclid, Ohio.; Charles A. Foster, of San Mateo, Calif., and the bride's two brothers, R. Stuyvesant Pierrepont, jr., and John Pierrepont.

Miss Pierrepont was introduced to society in 1930, after having finished at Foxcroft, Middleburg, Va. Mr. Kuhn, who is a son of Mr. and Mrs. William Speer Kuhn, of San Mateo, was graduated from Yale in 1933. He is a member of the National Recovery Administration staff in Washington. His mother is the former Miss Katherine Hill, of Memphis and Bolivar, Tenn.

Deb's Diary

Who, What and Where —as She Sees It.

DEAR DIARY:

After a fleeting trip to New York, Louise Waller and her mother are back in town. I just bet Louise's trunk on the return trip was filled to overflowing with pretties and smarties from the metropolis, ready for the fling about to descend upon the debutantes.

Yesterday while frock shopping, whom should I see but Emily Maddox quite chic and Highlander-ish in her gay yellow-checked costume and wee black fly-away hat.

Speaking of costumes and frocks—what a change the party this evening will be—no gleaming satins or rippling taffetas, but starched cottons and jolly ginghams—for the Radfords, who are feting Rannie Richardson, are giving a "country lad and lassie" party.

Political Parties Mobilize Feminine Oratorical Talent for Election Campaign

MRS. GEORGE HORACE LORIMER (left, above), Republican, and Miss Dorothee Scarborough (above), Democrat, are campaigning in the East.

Republican Women Leaders Challenged by Mrs. Roosevelt's Decision to Aid Cause of Caroline O'Day and Now Organizations Are Busy Arranging Speaking Tours.

By Mary Greiner Kelly.

WOMEN orators, who have been rushed this week to the political fronts in every State of the Union, are counted upon to talk each other down, in one of the most crucial Congressional campaigns in history. Will they sweep the tide for or against the New Deal? Just as militant on one side as the other, their vocal bombardments in the cause of party candidates and issues, will tell a dramatic tale on November 6.

Mrs. Franklin Roosevelt's decision to campaign for her friend and former "boss," Caroline O'Day, of New York, challenged Republican women of prominence, including former First Ladies, to throw their influence behind favorite candidates on the other side. Miss Natalie Couch, who opposes Miss O'Day for the Congressman-at-large seat from New York, will be given the aid and moral support of Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, Mrs. Benjamin Harrison and Mrs. Grace Wyeth, president of the National Republican Women's Club, all of whom live in her home State.

The last week saw Mrs. Calvin Coolidge rallying Republican forces in the home State of Representative Edith Nourse Rogers. Bent on counteracting this effect and sweeping an increased number of Massachusetts Democrats into office is Mrs. Izetta Jewell Miller, dynamic speaker for the Administration, who is being sent by the Democratic Congressional Speakers' Bureau into the most important strongholds of the Republican party.

Wires Are Kept Busy.

Her forceful attack through the Republican State of Pennsylvania will be met by the effective oratory of Mrs. George Horace Lorimer, president of the Republican Women's Club of Philadelphia and wife of the editor of the Saturday Evening Post. A popular speaker, Mrs. Lorimer is the feminine pride and joy of the G. O. P. in Pennsylvania.

In the meantime, telephones and telegraph wires out of the women's division of both major party headquarters are kept busy by Mrs. James H. Wolfe, acting Democratic vice chairman, and Mrs. Ellis A. Yost, Republican vice chairman, arranging itineraries of speakers and giving instructions to women out in the field.

Mrs. June Fickel, oratorical torch bearer for the Democrats, was recently intercepted by wire on her way to New Mexico, instructed to get off the train and make a speech at Amarillo, Tex. In 15 minutes' time she had to pull on her coat and hat, collect her luggage and thoughts and descend the steps wreathed in smiles for an awaiting committee. Whisked away to an assembled audience, she is said to have made one of the most effective talks of her career.

Miss Holmes on Tour.

Also effective in her political globe trotting is Miss Sybil H. Holmes, of Boston, assistant attorney general of Massachusetts, who has been sent on a speaking tour across the continent. Pretty and poised, this blonde Republican Portia has saved several pounds of political flesh demanded by Democratic shylocks from such candidates as Mrs. William Langer, gubernatorial aspirant in North Dakota, and Miss Gertrude Jones, who for the first time seeks a Congressional seat from Ohio.

Another woman speaker who is effectively aiding the Republican cause is Mrs. Silas H. Strawn, wife of the noted Chicago leader. Mrs. Strawn, widely known as a political leader in Illinois, is speaking in the Middle West.

One of the greatest Republican woman orators is Mrs. Christine Bradley South, daughter of a former Governor of Kentucky, who is now concentrating on getting her own State ticket elected. Forceful in speech and personality, Mrs. South has broadcast stirring messages over the National hookup at the close of many a Republican campaign.

Nellie Tayloe Ross, long recognized as a trump card in the Democratic oratorical deck, will take only a brief leave of absence from her duties as Director of the Mint during this campaign. Her appearances will be confined to her own State of Wyoming, where she will fill several engagements.

Emily Blair Always Available.

Emily Newell Blair, nationally known writer and speaker is another dependable Democrat who is every ready to take the stump at short notice.

While Alice Roosevelt Longworth never takes the platform, her writings furnish political ammunition for other Republican women who do, says Mrs. Yost. One of her admirers is Mrs. Robert Lincoln Royal, of Arizona, past president of the National American Legion Auxiliary, who is now dogging the trail of Representative Isabella Greenway on her tour of the Southwestern State.

Organization as well as public speaking are among the talents that distinguish Mrs. A. P. Flynn, Democratic regional director, of Logansport, Ind., who spoke yesterday before a large audience in Perrysburg, Ohio, and will fill another speaking date tomorrow in Monroe, Mich. The same holds true of Mrs. Worthington Scranton, member of the Republican National committee in Pennsylvania, and Mrs. Bertha Clark Hughes, Republican, of Nebraska, who are limiting their efforts to their home States.

Counted upon to rally younger voters to the Democratic colors in a series of last-minute appeals is Miss Dorothee Scarbrough, former assistant attorney general of Olympia, Wash., who is now devoting her legal talent to emergency legislation in the district.

Miss Morrow to Campaign.

Another champion debater from the same State, and now in the legal division of the Justice Department, is Miss Veida Morrow, who will devote some of her vacation time to a campaign speech or two in Indiana and Ohio, while Illinois, Michigan and Indiana have already telegraphed praises to Democratic headquarters for speeches delivered this week by Mrs. Glenn E. Plumb, young Cook County commissioner, of Chicago, who has proved herself a veritable spellbinder on the stump for her party ticket.

In Pennsylvania Miss S. M. R. O'Hara, Republican speaker, and former assistant attorney general under Gov. Pinchot, has completed a speaking tour of 50 counties in her own State. And, no doubt, following in the tracks of Miss Scarbrough will be Miss Pearl McCall, former assistant U. S. district attorney, who will round up the young Republican vote in Maryland and Delaware.

As to the women in Congress, they are campaigning as they never campaigned before, Mrs. Yost and Mrs. Wolfe say. Representative Mary Norton has thus far covered every county in New Jersey on a speaking tour. Edith Nourse Rogers hasn't left many stones unturned in Massachusetts, and Isabella Greenway, having Arizona pretty well in the bag, is lending a hand to a friend, Senator Key Pittman, in the neighboring State, Nevada.

Movie Players Bare Secrets Of Beauty Aids

By Frances Mangum.

AS THE social season gains momentum, more and more beauty hints come from Hollywood on how to look engaging morning, noon and night.

According to Pert Kelton, who has a ready eye for feminine pulchritude, many women think they need to reduce their stomachs when all they really need is to stand correctly. Faulty posture kills beauty quicker than anything, she says.

Don't forget your elbows, warns Irene Dunne. When they are brown or discolored they spoil an otherwise perfect appearance. Miss Dunne herself avoids this by rubbing a bit of arm lotion into her elbows every day and by bleaching them with peroxide and lemon or a bleaching cream occasionally.

Here's a helpful hint from Hazel Forbes: If you arch your eyebrows and wish to enhance your beauty, pluck them from underneath, for this has a tendency to make your eyes appear a great deal larger.

If you want to look as though your make-up is perfectly natural, says Betty Furness, pinch your cheeks to see the correct blood tones and match your rouge to that.

Fay Wray, who has been a strong advocate of brilliant nail polishes, believes the pendulum is swinging back to more conservative colors. Most ultra-smart women are using pale polishes now, she says, although the mahogany carmine and other such vivid tints are still popular, chiefly among young women.

Dolores Del Rio has very lovely dark hair and she keeps it shining like a halo with constant care. Her chief aid to beautiful hair is a good stiff brush. She wields it with vim and vigor for ten minutes night and morning. To give her hair a natural gloss, she rubs pure coconut oil into her scalp twice a week. The oil application also supplies the scalp massage that is so necessary for the growth of hair. For a shampoo she uses melted castile soap with a pinch of baking powder in it.

Victory Is Seen By Miss Frooks

New York Candidate for Congress in Capital on Brief Visit.

THRILLED at the prospect of the hectic battle before her, Miss Dorothy Frooks, nominated by the Law Preservation party to run for Representative at large from New York, yesterday stopped briefly in Washington on her way to New York, where she is confident of victory over Mrs. Caroline O'Day, Democratic nominee, and Mrs. Natalie Couch, Republican nominee.

Miss Frooks, who is on her way to New York from Miami, where she attended the annual convention of the American Legion auxiliary, expressed her surprise and disappointment that Mrs. Roosevelt has agreed to support Mrs. O'Day in the election.

"When I first decided to run for Congress," she said, "I wrote Mrs. Roosevelt and asked her support. She replied that due to her position she was unable to take any part in local politics. And I respected her decision. Later I heard she had decided to back Mrs. O'Day and I was surprised, but felt that if the First Lady of the land was backing Mrs. O'Day I should withdraw.

"I decided to remain in the race only when Mrs. Roosevelt announced she was in politics, not as the President's wife, but as Eleanor Roosevelt.

"When she made that decision I felt it was all right to oppose her.

Miss Frooks cited her record of public service in New York.

"I want it understood," she said, "that I am for the New Deal. I believe in it implicitly. But I think the President needs people around him who can give him constructive criticism, not 'yes' men."

Knitting Fad Revival Laid to Mrs. Roosevelt

New York Designer Attributes "Fever" to Mrs. Roosevelt's Use of Yarn in Public; Calls It Much More Practicable Than Cards.

THE KNITTING fever that has struck American women delights but puzzles yarn manufacturers and knitting shop proprietors.

"But I am inclined to believe Mrs. Roosevelt started it all," confided Mabel Kai, New York, knitting expert and designer of knitted clothes, who is giving instructions in the knitting shop at the Palais Royal for a few days.

"You see, when women saw Mrs. Roosevelt knitting in the Senate gallery, and other places like that, they began to think knitting might be fun after all. So they gave it a try, and of course after that when they saw how many lovely things they could make, they just couldn't stop knitting."

Miss Kai wore a knit sweater of soft gray wool, and a knit skirt of darker gray, which she designed. The costume was lovely enough to inspire any woman to try her hand at knitting.

"I find that knitting helps women develop original ideas," she said. "So many women who have always just bought what they saw in stores will see a sweater or dress and say they would like that in a different color combination, or made on different lines.

"These women tell me their ideas about what they want, and together we work out something that is suitable and individual."

Miss Kai says there are many reasons why women will continue to knit, now that they have begun again.

"For one thing, it's a sort of disease," she said. "Once you begin you can't stop. I can hardly wait to finish one outfit before I want to begin on another.

"The Paris designers are putting out so many new, fascinating things to knit that it is a sort of challenge to a woman. Then sports clothes are so popular, and of course no sports clothes are so practical and pretty as those knitted by hand."

Many women find they are happier using their energy knitting than playing cards, Miss Kai says.

"When they have spent hours knitting they have something to show for their efforts," she explained. "They feel they have created something. But if they had spent the same amount of time playing cards they probably would have lost money as well as time."

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I've been an interested reader of your column, especially the letters from elderly people, and now, particularly, "Martha" and "Mary."

I am similarly situated, and although my children are all lovely to me, I should prefer a home of my own, however small or poor.

* * * *

I have often thought of some plan along the lines suggested by "Ruth" in Monday's paper, and would be glad to start such an organization or to help. I have quite a lot of time.

I should be glad of some suggestions from you or others on just how to go about it. I would be pleased to correspond with some of these older mothers and I think we could be of mutual assistance, even though we did not really organize a club.

* * * *

I once belonged to a club organized through a magazine center. It was lots of fun, and help, too.

Yours sincerely, M. C.

Service to Mothers.

DEAR M. C.: Great oaks from little acorns grow and such an organization as "Mothers, Inc.," suggested by "Ruth" in Monday's column could very well have its beginning in the living room and the lively sympathetic imagination of intelligent, generous-minded woman. She might first canvass her friends and acquaintances for those having need of a motherly woman's domestic services, part or full time, and then broadcast an appeal through the public print for women of the type desired. She could constitute herself liaison officer between prospective employer and employe, and develop a service profitable alike to her and to the public.

* * * *

Proof that such a service should quickly "catch on" has come to me in the form of several letters from housewives anxious to secure the services of "Mary." Two such letters follow.

In the event other older mothers, reading your letter, wish to engage in correspondence, I shall be happy to effect an exchange of addresses.

M. H.

Letters for "Mary."

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: Will you kindly have "Mary" communicate with me. I will treat her like a mother, and be happy to make a fair deal with her. Respectfully.

B. R.

* * * *

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: I noticed in last Wednesday's paper a letter from a mother signed, "Mary," about her daughter's not wanting her in her home any longer. If she really wants a place, I would like to interview her. I would be willing to give her a nice home and salary. We have an all-electric home in the suburbs, and two children.

BLACKIE BEAR

BY D. SAM COX

They Nearly Got Dr. Coon.

When Billie Possum got through telling his story, and while the others were clapping their hands, Jay Bird flapped his wings and gave his very best "ha-ha-ha." Then he said:

"Once I heard Mrs. Man say 'it takes all sorts of people to make a world,' and I reckon it takes all sorts of dogs to make all sorts of work for all sorts of people. It's a good thing that the sort of dog that was after you had long, wooly hair that you could hold on to, for if it had been a hound like our friend here, or a pointer dog, there wouldn't have been any hair long enough to hold. So I reckon if we give our friend Blackie a chance to break into this conversation he will say, as he always does, that 'it might have been worse.'"

Blackie Is Silent.

Blackie was smoking his pipe, in a dreamy sort of fashion, and he didn't say a word, but just smiled and nodded his head up and down, as a sign that Jay Bird had told it all.

"Talking about things that could have been worse," said Dr. Coon, "I got in a scrape of that sort myself one day when I was a young fellow. I was just knocking around in the woods one night after I had eaten a good supper of roasting ears out of a neighbors' field, when I heard the man hollering to his dog to 'go after him.' The dog took his advice, and started out after him, and he was coming right toward me. I didn't know a thing about that part of the country, and so I didn't know where to hide, but I started running away from the man and the dog.

"I kept looking for a big tree that they couldn't shake me out of, but all the trees seemed to be little ones, and after a while I came to a big log that was lying on the ground and was hollow at the end, and the dog was so close behind me that I thought that I had better take that than nothing, and so I ran as far up the hollow as I could. I had hardly had time to draw a long breath before I heard somebody else scrambling right behind me, and then I felt his hot breath as his head was jammed against my hips. I could feel that there wasn't much hair on him, and I knew it was a possum.

Is Dr. Coon Scared?

"And at the end of the log the dog was standing and barking with all his might. In a minute the man was there, and when he saw the hollow log that his possum had gone in, he cut a long stick and trimmed it down till he had just some short, sharp prongs on it, and he rammed it into that hollow log till it reached the possum. Then he pushed and twisted the stick till he got it stuck all through the hair and hide of the possum, and then he pulled him out. He didn't have any idea that there was a nice fat coon left in the log, and so he called his dog and they went on home with the possum. I waited a long time till I was sure they were away from the tree, and then I backed out of the log and ran—no, I think I flew, to my house. I hope that possum wasn't any of your kinfolks, Billie."

"No, sir; he was no kin to me. None of my folks would ever have ran into such a hole as that."

Midget "Gym" Can Be Carried In Coat Pocket

By Ruth Anne Davis.

SLIM GYM is the name of a small gymnasium you carry around in your coat pocket, tuck away in your dresser drawer, or keep on your bedside table.

It was designed after a group of New York doctors had drawn up a chart of exercises which reduce and develop the different parts of the body. For instance, these medical men say, if your hips are too large and your legs too thin, there's no reason why you can't normalize your weight according to perfect standards. With this scientifically perfect plan of physical culture in mind, a company was formed to manufacture these small "gyms" weighing less than three pounds.

At first glance the slim gym resembles a camera, but first one part opens out and then another until there's everything imaginable for doing dozens of exercises. There's no chance of confusing your exercises, as the "gym" is accompanied with a folder of pictures showing you just what to do.

One tiny fixture makes it possible to adjust your exercise machine to any member of the family. For father's workout, you turn it one way; for your own less drastic exercising you turn it another, and still another turn makes it right for Junior.

Smartness in Compacts.

Matching your compact to your coat is just another way of being smart this season. In the toilet goods department of a local store are some flat clam-shaped compacts in blue, white, green and black with a space for loose powder and another section with either paste or cake rouge.

They are so beautifully constructed that no matter how many keys, cigarette cases and what-not they rub noses with in your purse, no matter how often they fall to the floor, or what hard wear they receive, they neither chip, scratch nor tarnish.

Hint for Male Shoppers.

There's nothing more forlorn, lost, and miserable looking than a lone man shopping for a woman's gift. In the midst of an African jungle confronted with lions, tigers, and orang outangs, he'd be braver than he is before the inquiring glances of the young women behind the counters. When they say, "And what would you like?" he doesn't know the answer. So here's a suggestion: If he wants something nice, conservative, and sure to please, what could be better than a black leather suitcase with either black or a gray moire lining, with the lid fitted with comb, brush and mirror, in sterling silver, and a powder box, lotion bottles and toothpaste tube with matching silver tops fastened to one side?

Most fitted cases are too full, the numerous items taking up too much room. This one is ideally roomy, and the fittings in perfect taste.

Manicure Preparations.

Into the field of manicure preparations comes a new stylist. Having studied the preferences of both European and American women in the manner of polishes and other fingernail accoutrements, she has happily combined the best of all countries. Her five shades are scarcely to be rivaled in purity of color tone, splendid consistency, and long durability.

Unlike some polishes, they retain their same quality, no matter how long they're left in the bottle. When they're spread on the nails there's no blotching and spottiness to mar a smooth, solid effect. The polishes come in cherry blossom, prairie rose, peach glow, jaquemenot and clear.

One of her most interesting innovations is a waterproof nail white for the tips of the nails. It comes in bottles in the same form as a polish and is applied beneath the nail tips with a small stick attached to the stopper. Unlike most whiteners, however, it stays on until it's removed with a polish remover.

Tablets for the Bath.

Magic is a mild word for the tablets contained in an attractively finished suede box. One of them in a tub of water gives a soothing, refreshing fragrance that makes a bath a luxury. There are 12 tablets in assorted odors, red rose, lavender, eau de cologne, freesia and verbena.

After the box is emptied it may be used for your pins, hair pins or other toilet items.

Mandarin Pajamas.

Any one arrayed in the mandarin pajamas featured in a downtown store would look like a queen from the Far East. A black tunic with a high rolled collar is trimmed in gold braid. A narrow placket down the front is treated in the same fashion, and also a large patch pocket. Voluminous trousers as full as skirts come in either a brilliant green or scarlet.

Hound Handkerchiefs.

Hound handkerchiefs are ideal for the sportswoman or any one who wants a sporty touch to her get-up. They are unusually large with hand-rolled hems, and dog prints in the corners. They're available in any of the new fall colors.

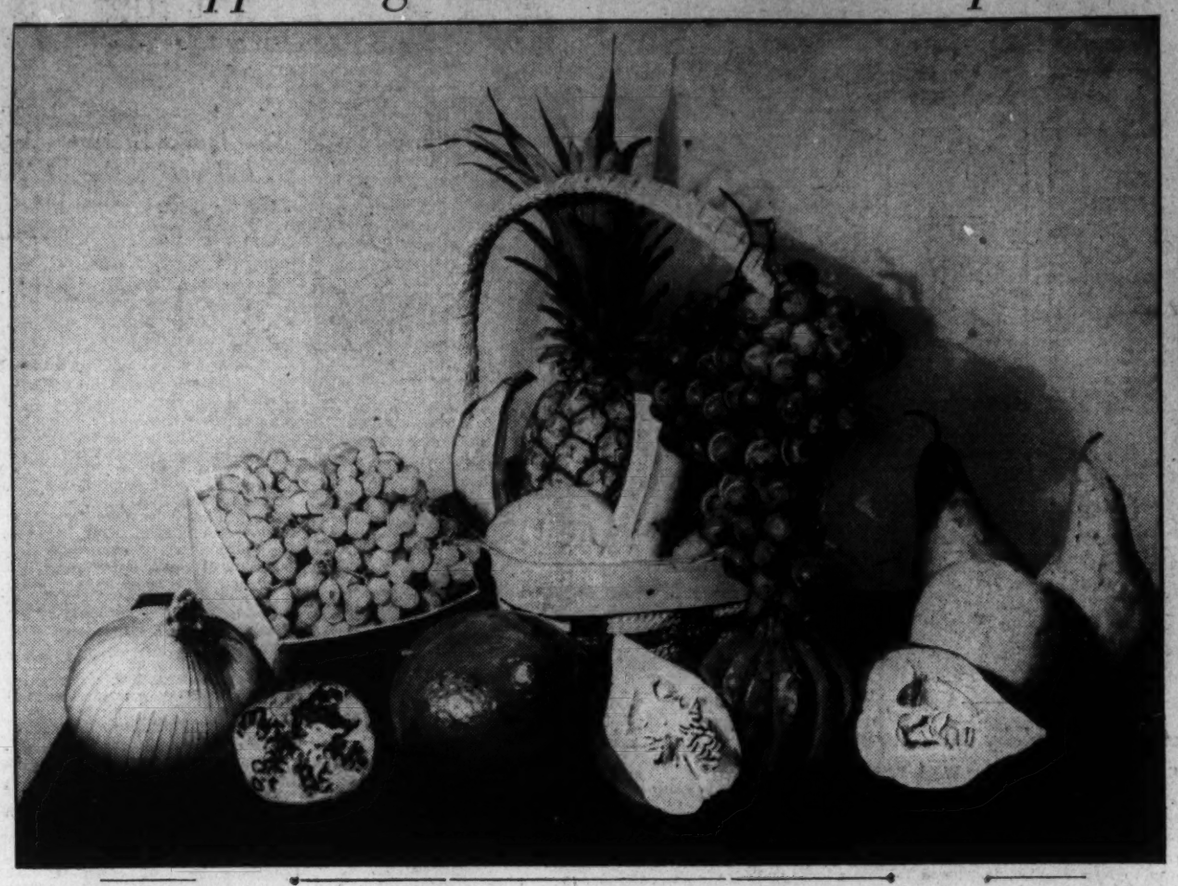
Minerals, Roughage and Vitamins Can Be Placed In Appetizing Salads With Little Preparation



Fruits and Vegetables on Market Offer Fine Opportunity.

By Dorothea Duncan.

FALL fruits and vegetables now on the market offer an excellent opportunity for introducing minerals, roughage and vitamins in appetizing salads. Most of these products are so appetizing they need little preparation and no adornment. They can be served in simple salads, with lettuce and French dressing as the only accompaniment.

Salads are of three kinds: the hearty salad, which may be served as the main course for luncheon or supper; the light salad, which accompanies or follows the meat course; and the fruit salad, which is usually served as a dessert.

Several satisfactory uses of salads are illustrated in the week-end menus that follow:

Saturday.

Breakfast Menu.

Fresh pears
Cooked cereal with top milk
Buttered toast Crisp bacon
Coffee Hot cocoa (for children)

Luncheon Menu.

Mixed raw vegetable salad
Peanut butter biscuits
Apple pie
Milk

Dinner Menu.

Tomato juice
Meat loaf
Creamed turnips Baked acorn squash
Whole wheat bread Preserves
Avocado salad with French dessing
Coffee Milk (for children)

Sunday.

Breakfast Menu.

Banana and pineapple cup
Dry cereal with top milk
Scrambled eggs
Toast Marmalade

Dinner Menu.

Consomme
Roast veal shoulder with dressing
Mashed potatoes Brussels sprouts
Head lettuce with Roquefort cheese dressing
Bread Butter
Vanilla blanc mange with chocolate sauce

Supper Menu.

Toasted cheese sandwiches
Orange and Bermuda onion salad
Hot chocolate with marshmallows.

Measure 2 cups of sifted flour and sift with ½ teaspoon salt and 4 teaspoons baking powder. Cut in 2 tablespoons shortening and 2 tablespoons peanut butter. Add enough milk to make dough that can be rolled. Bake in hot oven (400 degrees Fahr.) for 15 minutes.

This is the season for a good home-baked apple pie. If you are not skilled in the art of making pie crust, or if your time is too limited to bother making it, you can purchase a pie crust mixture at your grocer's that need only be mixed with water and rolled out. Four to six apples will make a 9-inch pie. If you enjoy a particularly juicy, spicy pie try making the filling this way: Slice apples thinly and place on bottom crust, cover with ½ cup of brown and ½ cup of white sugar mixed with 1 teaspoon of cinnamon and a few grains of nutmeg. Dot with butter and add ¼ cup of water. Cover with top crust, which has had several slits cut in it to allow steam to escape. Bake in hot oven (450 degrees Fahr.) 15 minutes, then decrease heat to moderate (350 degrees Fahr.) and bake 30 minutes longer.

End of Pineapple Season Near.

Pineapple is making its last appearance on the market for the season. The pineapple for the Sunday breakfast cup may be prepared the night before, and set in a covered container in the refrigerator. Add the bananas, and sugar, if desired, just before serving.

Lettuce, French Dressing Only Accompaniment Necessary.

The Roquefort cheese dressing for the Sunday dinner salad may be prepared as follows: Rub a cut onion on the inside of your mixing bowl. Then pour in as much French dressing as you will need for your dinner salads, and crumble Roquefort cheese into the dressing. This dressing is better if allowed to stand and season a little before serving.

Toasted cheese sandwiches are never so good as when made at home in an iron frying pan. Slice bread about ¾ of an inch think. Place cheese, a bit of mustard and a dash of salt between each two slices. Butter sandwiches on the outside instead of the inside. Place in a heated frying pan, and turn the heat low. Press together with a spatula. Brown both sides, and be sure to keep the heat low so the cheese has a chance to melt.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

The Inferiority Complex.

"It's nothing against you to fall down flat,
But to lie there—that's disgrace."
Edmund Vance Cooke.

A CHILD born into this busy and hectic world is a relatively minute structure. As soon as he is able to sense impressions there comes to him from the outside a feeling of helplessness. Unfortunately some children never "snap out" of this feeling. They are cared for, fed, petted, and coddled to such a degree that manhood or womanhood may arrive before the sense of independence and self-reliance begins to develop.

The child with a domineering father and mother is to be pitied. When he wants to think and act for himself he is not permitted to do so. Everything he does is criticized and his day is punctuated with a hundred "don'ts."

A situation may develop in which the child becomes the object of self-pity. He feels neglected, inadequate, insecure and discriminated against. In certain cases a feeling of injustice is followed by resentment and now and then a warped mentality emerges with a definite psychic complex.

If one is conscious of a sense of failure or inferiority he can not lift himself by his mental bootstraps. Nevertheless, if a person can properly evaluate shortcomings he may fully compensate for them by more intense effort—harder work. Those who are sure they are going to win often fail because they do not try hard enough. At times, however, the person with a submerged personality fails to make the slightest effort to accomplish a given task, because he says, "What's the use? I can not do it, anyway."

Overtraining in personal dominance, of course, may drive the child to the opposite extreme; thus the neighborhood bully develops. Often, however, boldness, even effrontery, is merely an attempt to compensate for a feeling of inferiority. It is the other extreme assumed by a personality that suddenly wakens to the fact that it is submerged. Western bad men and desperadoes of the type of the James brothers are examples of overcorrection.

Somewhere between the extreme of overconfidence and the sense of failure lies a middle ground on which every one should atempt to stand. At times we all fail, but every failure should teach its lesson and become an incentive to greater effort. With an inferiority complex the individual must school himself to be willing to try. If failure results the next attempt must be more intense and more conceptrated. If failure again results it may be that the task is beyond the capacity of the individual. Perhaps he has set himself to problems that are outside his realm of achievement. To adjust tasks to ability of accomplishment must then be attempted gradually.

Success brings confidence. A small task well done is followed by a mental glow, a sense of satisfaction and happiness. This may lead to the carrying of larger and larger loads that finally brings the individual to a normal mental level. Demosthenes became the world's greatest orator because as a boy he had a speech defect which he was determined to overcome.

Jennifer Hale

By Rob Eden

Suspected of the murder of David Corey, Jennifer Hale changes her name to Mary Dixon and flees to Seattle because, though innocent, she can not face the notoriety involved. Parker Ives, friend of the murdered man, knows her whereabouts; he sends her $1,000 and urges her to go still farther away. She meets Kent Severn, who gives her a job in his father's lumber company and falls in love with her. Through one of the girls in the office, Nita, she meets Andy Young and is alarmed to discover he is a detective. Kent's mother, disapproving of her son's interest in Mary, retains Andy to find out anything detrimental in her past.

THE first member of the firm of Young & Madigan came away from Mary Dixon chuckling to himself. Really he shouldn't take Mrs. Severn's money. It was too easy—the easiest money he had ever made.

His information, he thought, had been secured so suavely that Mary didn't even know she was being questioned. Why should she wonder why he wanted to know from which local high school she had been graduated, and in what year?

He was still smiling when he pulled into a gas station which was open all night—not because he needed gas, but because, with his familiarity of people, he knew the fellow on the after-midnight shift was a former Broadway high school boy.

"Lo, Slim," he said to the youth who came out of the station sleepily.

"'Lo, Mr. Young. What can I do for you?"

"Could have sworn the oil was low. Well, give me some gas, then. I'm taking an all-night run, and I'll need some more. Broadway high school boy, aren't you, Slim?"

"Sure Mike."

"What year?"

"1930."

Checking on Mary.

Andy drew his credit card from his billfold. Nothing like getting right on the job. That was his motto. Leave nothing for tomorrow that you can do today. Ten minutes ago he had dropped Mary at the Thornley Arms and here he was checking up on her already. Mary had gone to Broadway High School and had been graduated in the class of '30, too.

"Ran across a nice girl today who graduated in your year Mary Dixon. Know her?" Andy drawled as he handed Slim his card.

"Mary Dixon?"

"Big class, I suppose?"

"Biggest we ever had."

Andy didn't pursue the subject of Mary Dixon. He knew better than that.

Called at School.

After breakfast the next morning, before he went to his office, he called at Broadway High School, and entered the office of the secretary of the principal.

"Looking up a girl named Mary Dixon who was graduated in June, 1930," he said, presenting his card, which was not the card of the business firm of Young & Madigan. This card represented him as Andrew Young, insurance adjuster. Useful in dealing with people who didn't know him. Schools were frightened to death when you went in to them and said you were a detective.

"Mary Dixon, June, 1930," the girl repeated, going to the files. She turned to the "D's" went all through them, and then turned back to Mr. Young, waiting expectantly at the rail. "We have no Mary Dixon listed for 1930. There's a Grace Dickerson."

"No, this is Mary Dixon." Funny, but still he wasn't discouraged. "Try the February class."

The secretary tried the February class, but with not more success. At Andy's request she also went through the classes from 1926 to 1933, still without success. In 1926 there had been a Mary Dixon, but the secretary knew her personally, and she was now in China working for an importing firm.

"Could it be possible that your files aren't accurate?"

The secretary was indignant at that. Every student who had ever attended Broadway High School was entered in the files—with the class in which he or she had enrolled. If Mary Dixon had attended Broadway High School, only for a week, her name would be in its proper place. Perhaps she might have attended before 1926?

No Mary Dixon.

Andy shook his head. Mary Dixon, the Mary Dixon he knew, couldn't have been in the class of '26. He was a good judge of age, and when Mary said she was 21, he believed her, although he would have put her age at 20, or 19.

Because he didn't want to miss a bet, he looked through the high school annuals himself, watching for the class pictures, especially. He was no wiser when he finished than when he started. Nobody even resembling Mary Dixon appeared in the Broadway annuals.

After Broadway, he went to the other high schools. In fact, he spent the rest of the day making the rounds. At Queen Anne High School he found early in the afternoon a Mary Dickson whose class was 1930, but who had never finished. Two wasted hours were spent checking up on her, only to find that this Mary Dickson was blonde, 5 feet 7, and not his Mary Dixon at all.

Around 5 o'clock, when he had a complete list of private schools before him, he was telling himself that the job wasn't so easy after all. And he was also telling himself that if Mary Dixon had ever gone to Broadway as she said she had, he had not used the name of Mary Dixon. That was certain.

Why wouldn't she be using her own name? Why? Unless she had been married and was using her married name——

He hadn't asked her whether she had been married. He scolded himself for his carelessness, and immediately phoned his cousin. Nita didn't know either whether Mary had been married. Yes, she'd find out right away. She could ask Mary in some way so the girl wouldn't be suspicious, she said.

Half an hour later she called Andy back, and announced that Mary had never been married, which didn't help Andy in the least, which, in fact, made his problem more difficult.

The following day he started on the private schools, with no more luck than he had had with the public schools, except that the task was easier, because the private schools were smaller, and the principals and the teachers remembered every student they had had for years back.

Mrs. Severn called him as he returned to his office. Her voice over the phone was honey-sweet. "I thought I'd ring you and see how you were coming along, Mr. Young."

"Fine, Mrs. Severn. I'll have everything for you in a few days."

"Any definite information yet?"

"Well, I don't want to say yet what I have. I'm doing a good job on it, though, you can trust me for that."

"I rather wanted it by this weekend if you could have it——"

What Was Wrong?

"I'll have it, don't worry." After he replaced the phone on its standard, Andy sat drawing circles, squares, and triangles on a sheet of memo paper. It was his way of displaying that he was worried, and things weren't going as they ought to go.

Things weren't. Mary's initials went into one of the triangles and into one of the circles her full name. A giant square inclosed all the smaller figures.

Had he figured Mary out all wrong?

Were his perceptions getting dull? Was Andy Young falling down on his character reading, which was one of the things on which he prided himself?

A sweet thing, a nice girl, was the way he had read Mary. A girl with high ideals. And if she were the nice girl, the sweet thing, the girl with high ideals he thought she was, why had she lied to him about her school? A simple lie, a small lie, but a lie. It would have meant nothing to him if he hadn't accepted Mrs. Severn's job.

"You're slipping, Andy, my boy," he said to himself sadly as he crumpled up the sheet of memo paper. From the top drawer he took more paper, this time a large yellow sheet. For the next hour he was busy putting down on paper everything he and Mary had ever talked about—as far as he could remember. Start from the beginning again when you're stumped, was another of his mottoes.

Everyday Suits Made Attractive by Blouses

Pattern No. 698.

JUST AS a little whipped cream transforms a plain and prosaic dessert into a tempting concoction, so does a pretty blouse change an everyday suit into a charming costume. For blouses have blossomed out in lovely fabrics. Even lame has come out into the daylight. The blouses with the bow would be very attractive of lame, or of satin.

The surplice blouse has wide jabot revers and its collar is becomingly high at the back of the neck. Silk crepe, either plain or printed, would be a suitable fabric.

Both blouses are in the same pattern, and both are very simple to make. Sizes are 36 to 46. The surplice blouse, in size 40, requires 2⅛ yards of 39-inch fabric; the other, 1¾ yards.

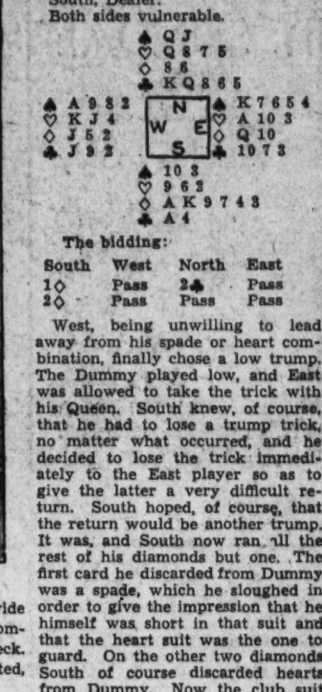
Culbertson on Bridge

An Influential Discard.

In match point duplicate games, overtricks are of the utmost importance. If you score 20 or 40 more points than every other team playing the same hand your top-score will count just as much as if you had penalized the opponents 4,000 points when they could actually have scored a game against you.

On today's hand North and South reached the contract of two diamonds. Good defense would have defeated this contract. However, I must report that East and West permitted South not only to fulfill his contract, but to make three overtricks as well.

South, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1◇	Pass	2♣	Pass
2◇	Pass	Pass	Pass

West, being unwilling to lead away from his spade or heart combination, finally chose a low trump. The Dummy played low, and East was allowed to take the trick with his Queen. South knew, of course, that he had to lose a trump trick, no matter what occurred, and he decided to lose the trick immediately to the East player so as to give the latter a very difficult return. South hoped, of course, that the return would be another trump. It was, and South now ran all the rest of his diamonds but one. The first card he discarded from Dummy was a spade, which he sloughed in order to give the impression that he himself was short in that suit and that the heart suit was the one to guard. On the other two diamonds South of course discarded hearts from Dummy. Now the club suit broke and was run down, and on the last three clubs South discarded his own three hearts.

At this point everybody was down to three cards, with one spade and two hearts left in Dummy. Fortunately for the Declarer, the two top cards in each major suit were divided, and the picture of the Dummy had a tremendous influence on the defense when they were confronted with a choice of discards. Both East and West finally decided to hold the same pattern of cards as the Dummy, two hearts and one spade.

South, of course, had treasured two small spades and his last trump. A spade lead from Dummy dropped the only two outstanding cards in that suit and South, after getting in with his trump, won the last trick with his long spade for a score of five-odd.

COOKED BANANAS BRING VARIETY AND NEW FLAVOR TO THE MEAL

COOKED BANANAS are a new taste sensation! Baked, broiled, or fried, they are delicious with ham, lamb, sausage—almost any meat! And so easy to prepare! Just look:

TO BROIL BANANAS: Peel bananas, brush lightly with butter, place on rack of broiler or in pan. Broil 5 to 6 minutes, or until tender and brown. Serve hot.

TO BAKE BANANAS: Bake bananas in skins on the rack of a moderate oven (375°F.) 10 to 15 minutes, or until dark in color and soft to touch. Serve in skins or peel carefully. Serve hot.

Or, peel bananas, arrange in shallow baking pan and bake in moderate oven (375°F.) 10 to 12 minutes, or until tender. Serve hot.

TO FRY BANANAS: Peel bananas, cut in halves crosswise or in quarters. Fry in very hot deep fat (395°F.) 4 to 6 minutes, or until light brown. Drain on unglazed paper and serve hot.

Partially ripe bananas are best for cooking. Select those with yellow skins, tipped with green—and buy them by the "hand"!

Suspect Held After Kidnap Effort Fails

Woman's Threat of Law Causes Auto Driver to Free Child.

Danville, Va., Oct. 25 (AP).—After an all night search, one escape and a thrilling chase, police today held C. M. South, 52-year-old salesman of Salem, Va., charged with attempting to abduct Virginia Case, 9, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Case, of near the city. The alleged kidnap attempt occurred yesterday afternoon as the child was on her way home from Stonewall Jackson School.

The police searched through the night for South's car, the license numbers of which they held, and the man was arrested by Patrolman H. R. Dameron, when he saw the car parked on a street this morning.

Dameron turned the prisoner over to Deputy Sheriff H. L. Shelton, of Pittsylvania County, who was conducting the investigation, since the alleged crime occurred outside the city limits.

Deputy Shelton carried South to the school to obtain the girl's identification, but when the school building was reached, South slipped under the steering wheel and drove away as Officer Shelton alighted.

Alarm Sent to Danville.

An alarm was sent to Danville police, and Shelton commandeered a car to pursue. The wanted man drove along the Chatham highway in the direction of Lynchburg.

Ten miles out on the road, Shelton overtook South's car, rode alongside, and ordered him to halt. He refused to comply, Shelton said, and the officer dropped behind, drew his revolver and shot a rear tire.

South leaped from the car and ran across a field. Watching the pursuing officer over his shoulder, he failed to see a barbed-wire fence and crashed into it. Before he could extricate himself Shelton caught up and handcuffed him.

The alarm telephoned to Danville police had sent city officers in pursuit, also, and they arrived as Shelton was placing South under arrest. He was brought to the Danville Jail.

Offer of Pennies Refused.

Officers said the little girl was accosted yesterday morning on her way to school by a man fitting South's description, and offered pennies if she would enter his car. She refused and continued on her way to school.

When school was out, officers said, the man was waiting, and again offered her money, this time succeeding in enticing her to enter the machine. As the car started away the child screamed, and a colored woman, looking from her cabin window, shouted to the man that she would "put the law on him" unless he released the child. The car was stopped then and the child got out and went home.

Her parents, hearing her story, notified Deputy Sheriff Shelton and a search for the car was started.

Court Denies McMahon Place on County Ballot

Cumberland, Md., Oct. 25 (AP). A petition of Hugh Carey McMahon, of near Grantsville, for an order to force the Garrett County election supervisors to put his name on the county ballot as an independent candidate for the State Senate was denied in Allegany County Circuit Court here yesterday.

The hearing was before Judge Albert A. Doub, who based the court's action on the grounds that it had no power to modify the law requiring a certificate asking a name placed on the ballot to be presented 15 days before filing day. The court added that there was insufficient evidence to show that J. Frank Browning, president of the Garrett election supervisors, intentionally misled McMahon about the date in which to file for office.

Blooded Stock Goes Begging At Walnut Hall Sales in Boyce

By C. B. Carr
(Post Staff Writer).

Boyce, Va., Oct. 25 Yearlings, broodmares, weanlings, hunters and race horses went begging at the third annual Walnut Hall sales here this afternoon at the estate of William du Pont, jr., under auspices of the Fasig-Tipton Co., of New York. A total of 109 offerings brought $13,385, an average of about $123 a head.

Most of the stock sold at what horse owners declared was give-away prices. The 109 head sold represented but part of the more than 170 offered for sale, the other offerings going by the pass, no-bid or by-bid route. Kenneth N. Gilpin paid the high price of the day, $800, for an offering of Mrs. John Hay Whitney.

While a matjority of the stock failed to bring prices comparing with the handsome figures of 1932, the first year of the sales, when the total for less than 100 horses was around $50,000, three stables at least sold at prices considered fair. Silver Cloud, a roan gelding by Imp, for $440, while another offering of the farm, Star Trap, by Imp. the Satrap, out of Fair Star, realized $625. Mrs. John Hay Whitney, of Upperville, Va., sold a colt and three fillies for $2,200. Ameroid, by the Porter, out of Outburst, brought $300; a black filly by Lucullite, out of The Colonel's Lady, $550; a bay filly by Imp St. Germans, out of Grizel, $350, and a chestnut filly by Imp Teddy, out of Imp Sinny, $800.

Robert J. Walden, who offered two colts, received $350 for each. They were a bay colt by Imp Bucellas, out of Fallacy, and a brown colt by Imp Bucellas, out of Fallacious. Some mares sold as low as $10, as bidding dropped to a standstill. About 1,000 horsemen and horsewomen with stables in practically all States of the Atlantic Seaboard attended the sale, many of whom planned to stay in Virginia for the races tomorrow at Mont Pelier, the home of Mrs. T. H. Somerville, Orange, Va.

Work Starts This Week On Dam at Shinnston

Shinnston, W. Va., Oct. 25 (Spl.). Construction of Shinnston's $48,000 PWA dam across Robinson's Run to provide the city with an adequate water supply will get under way before the week-end, according to O. J. Yoho, of Cameron, contractor, who said it would be completed within three months.

Yoho has arranged with P. M. Harrison, of Clarksburg, manager of the reemployment office there, for the labor of 100 men on the dam as the contract calls for that sort of labor, including some World War veterans.

The dam will be 33 feet high and will impound 22,000,000 gallons of water. Approximately 8,500 feet of pipeline will be required to bring the water to the present city water works.

Court Fixes A Time Limit In All Filings

Gordon Tull's Appeal Fails in Somerset County Case.

Annapolis, Oct. 25 (AP).—A decision of the court of appeals which, in effect, provides that independent candidates for office must file their certificates within the time limit set by State law for party candidates was handed down today in a Somerset County election case.

The specific case was that of Gordon Tull, Princess Anne attorney, who sought to run as an independent candidate for State's attorney of Somerset County. Tull filed his certificate of nomination, signed by more than the 500 voters required by law, with the county supervisors of elections on September 28, 16 days after the primary election.

The supervisors refused to place his name on the ballot for November 6 election, holding that under the State law certificates must be filed 15 days before a primary. Tull took the case to the Somerset County Circuit Court and lost. He appealed the lower court's decision.

The case was argued Tuesday, and Chief Judge Carroll T. Bond today, acting for the court, handed down a per-curiam opinion affirming the decision of the Somerset County Court, which sustained the supervisors. The reasons for the court's action will be set forth in an opinion to be filed later.

Although the court acted only on the case before it, the ruling sets a precedent that will serve as a guide for election supervisors in making decisions on filings.

Claude Talley, attorney for Tull, in presenting the case to the court of appeals, argued that the legislative intent behind the requirement for filing 15 days before a primary was to make it apply to political party candidates. He said it prevented a political party from waiting until after a primary and then putting a ticket in the field against the primary nominees. The attorney contended that independent candidates should be able to file up to within ten days of the election.

Hagerstown, Md., Oct. 25 (Spl.).—Completing a 5,000-mile airplane journey, which started last Thursday at Santiago, Chile, Miss Stella Seibert, daughter of Percy Seibert, Santiago, arrived here yesterday to visit her grandfather, M. Finley Seibert, who has been very ill.

Although Halloween is almost a week away, Fredericksburg had a preview of eerie thrills when workmen in a thickly-settled part of the city unearthed a skeleton on the property of J. E. Timberlake. Dr. F. T. Cassidy, who examined the bones, said that their state of preservation indicated burial early in the eighteenth century.

Weather that refused to admit that fall has actually arrived was too much of a temptation for a plum tree on the property of Fred Cochran, of Winchester. The last few balmy days opened a crop of white blossoms.

Scottsville, down in Albemarle County, may soon listen to the drone of regular airplane service. Government surveyors have been scouring that area from the air and on foot for a possible field to install beacon lights and flood lights for emergency landings.

Rumor has it that Charles "Pretty Boy" Floyd, late notorious desperado, was once a resident of Dinwiddie County. County residents believe the terror of the Ozarks lived in Butterworth years ago before a family of Floyds, including four brothers, moved to Oklahoma.

Similarity in pronunciation of names is causing some confusion among voters in Waynesboro, Pa. It seems that the confusion involves John G. Mumma, tax collector of Waynesboro, and Paul C. Moomaw, candidate for General Assembly, who pronounce their names similarly. Each man has been stopped numerous times and asked about the policies of the other. Involving things even more is the fact that they both are connected with the same business concern.

Farmer's Haste To Bag Squirrel Ended by Death

When he sighted the squirrel in a tree on his farm on Laurel Mountain, Poling called to his daughter, Mrs. Virgie Bassel, to bring him a shotgun. Before she reached him he suffered the heart attack and was dead when she arrived at his side.

Besides his wife and daughter, Poling is survived by five other daughters and a son. The funeral was held today.

Beer Yields Virginia Tax Of $737,000

Richmond, Va., Oct. 25 (AP).—The average Virginian drank more than 2½ gallons of beer during the first 12 months after a special session of the legislature made it legal in the Old Dominion in September, 1933.

This per capita average was announced today by the State department of taxation in its first consumption computation. Every man, woman and child in the State was counted in arriving at the average.

The total consumption of beer from September 4, 1933, until September 1, 1934, was 6,663,606 gallons. Dr. William B. Stauffer, tax department economist, said this represents "a per capita annual consumption for the State of 2.74 gallons or approximately 28 12-ounce bottles per person."

Revenue Totals $737,000.

State revenue from the sale of beer during the 12 months amounted to more than $737,000. Dr. Stauffer said excise tax collections for the period totaled $670,223.11. C. L. Pettis, department auditor, said license taxes to June 30, 1934 amounted to $67,360.03.

Dr. Stauffer said his figures clearly reflected the seasonal nature of beer consumption, the summer months being highest.

"From a revenue standpoint," the economist added, "a conservative original estimate has been happily more than achieved, and it is quite likely that the anticipated collections of $612,000 for the fiscal year, already started, and ending June 30, 1935, will be realized unless the habits of Virginians undergo substantial modification in the ensuing months."

Tax Averages 10 Cents.

The Virginia tax averages approximately 10 cents a gallon. The rates are $2.75 a 31-gallon barrel and 1 cent a 12-ounce bottle.

For the fiscal period ending June 30, 1934, the original budget estimate of the yield from the beer excise tax from September 4, 1933, to June 30, 1934, was $368,000. The actual revenue yield was $416,919.90 for that period, or $48,919.90 in excess of the budget estimate.

Screen Players Finally Seem on Verge of Becoming Part of Organized Labor

Actors' Guild May Become a Unit of Union

Eddie Cantor Is President; Halloween Parties Afoot; About Showshops.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Six years ago the ladies and gentlemen dedicating their talents to the furtherance of Hollywood's artistic aims attempted to organize under the banner of Actors Equity, whose cagey little magazine comes to this desk every month, and were right royally trounced by the producers for their "effrontery."

Today, so Leicester Wagner, ear-to-the-grounder for United Press in Hollywood, tells me in a wire dispatch that is still practically hot, it seems likely that the Screen Actors Guild, under the presidency of Eddie Cantor, will affiliate with the American Federation of Labor, through Equity.

What a triumph this would be for Frank Gilmore, who didn't do so well on his first essay as a mediator on the West Coast!

A series of meetings has crystalized sentiment in favor of the organization move and the executive boards of the guild, without a dissenting vote among its 30 or more actors and actresses, approved a plan to seek a charter.

Future Procedure.

Three steps remain: The plan must be approved by Equity's council, meeting in New York next week, it must be voted upon by the guild full membership and by the Equity membership. There is none who believes a hitch will forestall the move, for nearly three-fourths of the guild membership already belong to Equity.

The guild, according to Secretary Kenneth Thomson, maintains it was forced into the move by the producers, who have refused to accept any of the proposals made by the guild designed to better working conditions.

Basic working conditions are: Eight-hour day, with travel time considered part of that day for day players, but not for contract people; new standard contract with clause providing for arbitration, 15 hours' rest period between calls, overtime pay for free lancers and players, no Sunday or holiday work unless compensated for by another day off, abolition of the call bureau, no lending of an actor without his consent.

I am particularly in favor of that last clause. Any other arrangement, it seems to me, places the actor in the position of being, to all intents and purposes, a chattel that can be "sold down the river" at any moment.

There are HalIoween parties afoot in practically all of the Capital's motion picture theaters. The Warner Brothers' houses, perpetuating a custom that was established under the managerial guidance of Harry M. Crandall, will hold special kiddies' parties in all of the neighborhoods they serve on the gala night. These will be in the nature of costume parties, at which prizes will be awarded for the best disguises, suitable souvenirs distributed and all of the traditions of the evening observed to the best advantage of both the theaters and the youngsters in search of fun.

RKO-Keith's Theater, pursuant to the policy adopted last year, with eminent success, will run an extended schedule that will permit merrymakers to come and go at their discretion, enjoying the best features of the bill at any hour they may elect. In other words, Keith's will be open on a continuous performance basis until the last gun is fired on one of the most picturesque nights of the fall season.

More Sterling Bookings.

Speaking of the Warner Brothers' Theaters—and you were, were you not?—November will be a so-called banner month for these struggling amusement enterprises!

"Happiness Week" will begin the new month at the Earle a week from Friday. On the screen, Dick Powell will be presented in "Happiness Ahead," in which he stars with Josephine Hutchinson, new film find, and a former "Rame's Head" player in the Capital, and "the funniest man in the world," Jimmy Savo, will head the stage program, which also will include the "Sidewalk Cafe," novel vaudeville revue.

Another outstanding attraction for the Earle stage during November will be the presentation of Fred Waring and his Pennsylvanians the week beginning Friday, November 16, with all of the Waring stage and radio stars appearing.

Other Hits.

Screen attractions at the Earle will include Barbara Stanwyck in Willa Cather's "A Lost Lady," Dick Powell, Ruby Keeler and a large cast in "Flirtation Walk," first "military musical" on the screen; "The Pursuit of Happiness," the bundling hit, with Francis Lederer, and "Limehouse Blues," with George Rafi, Anna May Wong, Jean Parker and Kent Taylor.

Following the current engagement of "One Night of Love" at the Metropolitan, the outstanding cinema line-up for the weeks ahead includes "Big Hearted Herbert," with Guy Kibbee in the title role; Dolores Del Rio as "Madame Du Barry"; Joan Blondell and Glenda Farrell in "Kansas City Princess"; Ida Lupino and Richard Arlen in "Ready for Love"; and "The Firebird," with Verree Teasdale and Ricardo Cortez.

Like Mr. Meakin's list, recited here yesterday, this looks exceedingly promising. Now if they all just will make good!

With regard to Fred Waring and his Pennsylvanians, I still insist—and Fred will bear me out—that I had something to do with the first organized publicity campaign ever launched in his favor. It may not have been so hot as an example of inspired promotion, but it got results and culminated in the unchallenged record that Fred and his boys enjoy of having played a greater number of weeks in the National Capital than any other novelty orchestra ever heard of. We have related the genesis of this adventure in publicization too often to subject you to it again here and now.

Columbia Cast.

Dorothea Lewis and Richard Kreuzburg, both veterans of many a good local show, head the group as a pair of mountain lovers. They are cast as Cracker Gaddis and Clem Betts.

Dorothy A. Clarke, who recently joined the players after a summer with the Berkshire Playhouse, Stockbridge, Mass., is cast as Annie Bevins, with B. A. P. Doehrer playing opposite her, as Buck Gaddis. Lois Alexander, making her first appearance with this organization since she figured so prominently in "The Giant Stair," with which the Columbia Players won the last one-act play tournament, will take the part of the love-sick Piney Hyatt.

Arthur Westover, of the Shelton-Amos Players of New York, will play the peddler. Joe Bourne is cast as "Pink" Freeze, Juliet Edes Alves as Ma Betts, Wayne Bobst as Pa Betts, Bess Wilkirson as Gypsy Carter, Wade Ribinson as Uncle "Peg-Leg" Gaddis, L. Wallis Alves as Tom Bevins and A. E. Dubber as the Judge.

"Moonshine and Honeysuckle" will be presented at Pierce Hall, Fifteenth and Harvard streets northwest, on November 7 and 8.

Post Mortem Note.

I thought Mickey Walker won, even if Natie and Mrs. Brown are good friends—I hope—of mine. Leather knows no brother.

Who's Afraid of Big, Bad Wolf?

Or of lions, tigers, jaguars, mice, or anything else for that matter? Evidently not Virginia Read, who finds Wink, Blink and Nod, these three baby lion cubs, extremely amusing. Miss Read, it may be recalled, is appearing currently on the screen with Irene Dunne and John Boles in "The Age of Innocence," recently seen at RKO-Keith's Theater.

Straight From the Studios

Shakespearean Cycle Now Seems Imminent in Films; Edward Arnold Likely Choice for Diamond Jim; News and Gossip of Hollywood.

By Edwin Schallert.

Hollywood, Oct. 25.—With Hollywood responsive as it is to all influences, it could have been surmised long ago that the Shakespearean complex would hit hard. It assuredly will before long, and all because the movie studios suddenly discovered through the production of "Midsummer Night's Dream" that Shakespeare was favored by the "four million" rather than the "four hundred."

LOIS WILSON.

It's just an idea as yet, but Mady Christians, who because of her performance in "Wicked Woman," has a long-term contract now with M.-G.-M., has with considerable determination set about trying to induce the studio to film "The Merchant of Venice," and is said to be progressing with the proposal. You see, she is very ambitious to play Portia on the screen, having done it on the stage in Europe.

And possibly, radical as such a production idea is, she may be able to realize the dream. The English producers also intend to film "The Merchant of Venice." Also this is one of the great Max Reinhardt presentations.

Diamond Jim Revived.

While peace is not yet established concerning who will make the story of Diamond Jim Brady, it would appear that the title character has been duly discovered. It is understood that if Charles R. Rogers goes ahead with his plan to make the feature, Edward Arnold will appear in the role. And what more ideal choice? Also, it would give Arnold, who is headed toward that goal, his first real starring opportunity. It is not unlikely that he will, by the way, be among the nominees for the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences awards because of the work he did in "Sadie McKee." He is making bigger strides than any other character actor today.

Romantic Role In "Musketeers."

Alan Hale will be one of "The Three Musketeers." He will enact the role of Porthos in the famous classic And that will take him back to the romantic costume drama days in earnest. He was seen in somewhat similar surroundings in "Robin Hood" with Douglas Fairbanks.

John Cromwell has been elected to direct "The Three Musketeers," which will star Francis Lederer. The start of filming is settled on as some time next month. Cromwell returned from his European trip about a week ago.

DeMille Stands Corrected.

Charles Bickford rises to challenge C. B. DeMille's statements regarding correct pronunciation of the English language. He says: "I am afraid Mr. DeMille makes the common mistake of many producers in thinking that because an actor has been cast in gangster roles or other roles that require a low form of expression, and has given authentic performances in such roles, that he can not play others requiring well-spoken English. These producers fail to see the real persons behind the grease-paint; they do not consider the years of experience that go into the playing all types of parts in the theater in the instance of the well-read and cultured people who can play gangsters and gentlemen equally well. In overlooking this great supply of talent, the producers put themselves to the unnecessary trouble of importing foreign talent that is seldom if ever as competent as native talent, even in the matter of speaking correct English.

"Mr. DeMille declares that he would love to hear a good, clear, perfect pronunciation of the word 'yes.' Surely, Mr. DeMille is an expert on the pronunciation of that particular word. In all the millions of times that he has heard it, certainly there must have been some clear, ringing, enthusiastic, correct pronunciation of the word."

Picture Pageant In Review.

Charles Ray had been signed up for a role in "Ticket to a Murder," which is being produced by Arthur Alexander at the Beechwood Studios. Lois Wilson is the feminine lead, and Ralph Graves and Ray will share leading parts.

Adult Teaching Urged to Halt 'Moral Slump'

Dr. S. C. Mitchell Speaks at Lynchburg School Convention.

Lynchburg, Va., Oct. 25 (AP).—Adult education is necessary at this time to "take up the lag" caused by invention outrunning conscience, Dr. S. C. Mitchell, professor of history at the University of Richmond, told the State-wide convention of the Virginia Cooperative Education Association here tonight.

Referring to "the corruption revealed in government and the moral abyss disclosed in big business," Dr. Mitchell asserted "we have recently witnessed a moral breakdown, and fears have arisen as to the bases of our social order."

Tonight's session was devoted to the two-fold theme of the association, now affiliated with the National Association of Parents and Teachers—enrichment of life by the opportunities for adult education, and the State's education program as applied to the community.

Dr. Mitchell discussed the first topic, while the second was the subject of J. L. Blair Buck, supervisor of adult education in Virginia.

Mr. Buck substituted on the program for Dr. Sidney B. Hall, State superintendent of public education, utilizing in his address information included in the paper prepared by Dr. Hall, who was detained by illness.

Addresses in the afternoon by Miss Alice Sowers, adult education expert from headquarters of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers, and members of city and rural associations in separate conferences made up a program dealing with special problems of parent-teacher work.

Importance of home care and training in pre-school years, the need for education in the uses of public health programs, and the study of the underprivileged and delinquent child were among subjects given prominent place on programs.

Sharp discussion marked the meeting for consideration of moving picture programs, Mrs. Berry D. Willis, of Norfolk, having been challenged by Mrs. James A. Richardson, of Richmond, when the Norfolk resident, chairman of the State committee on motion pictures, characterized the better films council as "just another box office device." Mrs. Richardson upheld the work of the council.

New Low Price Set In Philippine Sugar

New York, Oct. 25 (AP).—The reported purchase today by an American refiner of 18,000 bags of excess quota Philippine sugar at 2.55 cents delivered is the lowest duty-paid price in the history of organized sugar markets, according to the New York Coffee & Sugar Exchange.

This purchase, however, is in a special category, as it can not be delivered to the consuming trade before January 1, 1935, because the insular possession has already filled its quota allotted by the Agriculture Department for the current year.

The lowest price previously paid for duty-free sugar was on May 31, 1932, when there was a sale for 2.57 cents a pound, but at that time there was a duty on Cuban sugar of 2 cents, which made the cost and freight Cuban price 0.57 cents. Today, with Cuba's duty .9 cent per pound, the parity price for Cuban sugars would be 1.65 cents when based on the reported sale of the Philippine product.

Student Leader Found Shot to Death in Car

St. Louis, Oct. 25 (AP).—Authorities were attempting to determine tonight whether William F. Rosenbaum, 21-year-old Washington University campus leader, found shot to death in his automobile today, committed suicide or was the victim of an attack. A pistol was found in the car.

Silk Factions To Meet Here

Mill Owners and Workers to Confer Today With Textile Board.

Paterson, N. J., Oct. 25 (AP).—Leaving behind them a silk and rayon dyeing industry virtually paralyzed by the day-old strike of 30,000 workers, representatives of employers and employes left for Washington tonight to confer tomorrow with the National Textile Labor Relations Board in the hope of bringing the strike to a speedy conclusion.

Within an hour after mills opened today strikers had forced the shutdown of most plants. The others worked with skeleton crews. Tomorrow picket lines wil form outside these plants determined to make the walkout complete.

The invitation to confer on a settlement of the strike—the first major walkout since President Roosevelt made his recent plea for industrial peace—was extended by Benjamin Squiers, executive director of the National Textile Labor Relations Board.

Anthony Ammirato, president of Local 1723 of the Dyers Federation, charged that the manufacturers deliberately provoked the strike in an attempt to break the year-old union.

U. S. Farm Plan Backed at Rome

World Institute Will Vote Approval Today.

Rome, Oct. 25 (AP).—It appeared certain tonight that the American proposal for a world-planned economy in agriculture would be approved tomorrow by delegates to the International Institute of Agriculture.

Dr. Henry Charles Taylor, permanent delegate from the United States, outlined his plan today and delegates voiced unanimous approval.

Dr. Taylor asked the delegates to change the direction of the institute in order to provide the interested governments with all information necessary to enable them to carry out the work of planning. Rexford Tugwell, United States Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, was not present at the session.

Cotton Owners Offer Workers Olive Branch

Textile Men of North and South Adopt Rules of Cooperation.

Boston, Oct. 25 (AP).—Cotton textile manufacturers of the North and South today joined in a statement of employer-employe relationship and invited other major industries to follow suit.

A 10-point platform, adopted but not made public by the American Cotton Manufacturers Association in the South a week ago, was ratified here by the eightieth annual meeting of the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers, the Northern employers' organization.

Its adoption was described by Russell T. Fisher, secretary of the National association, as the first platform of principles ever reached by the two branches of the industry.

Cooperation Held Aim.

"It is a move directed," he said, "toward cooperation between employers and employes to the mutual benefit of both and to the best interests of the public."

The platform declared neither membership nor nonmembership in a labor organization "shall interfere with a man's free right to work," while another plank expressed opposition to law by "force or edict."

"The industrial codes, now law," it stated, "should be changed only by the definitely prescribed and orderly procedure now available and no other method should be recognized."

It asserted that the right of a man or woman to work was "as fundamental as the right to strike;" the minority groups of employes must be permitted freedom in negotiation with employers; strikes or lockouts "should be illegal when they are designed to coerce the Government, either directly or indirectly, by inflicting hardship on the community," and expressed the belief that representatives of organized labor ought to be compelled to have "definite legal responsibility."

Stand Taken on Relief.

The granting of relief during a strike, the platform set forth, "should not be used to start or maintain strikes," but, it added, "no one can question relief given to large numbers who have been thrown out of work involuntarily by the strike of a few."

The increasing mechanization of the industry was met inferentially by two points in the platform.

One read: "The cotton textile industry, if it is to survive, must avail itself of the developments of science and invention."

The other was: "The duty of management to conduct the business for which it is responsible, should not be obstructed by forcing a surrender of its proper functions to the Government or employe organizations."

G. W., Pointing to Vandy, Due to Beat Wake Forest Easily Tonight

This Morning...

With Shirley Povich

AT THIS late date, the New York Athletic Commission is attempting to reform wrestling. A "relentless investigation" of the sport has been ordered on the suspicion that the boys are not strictly on the level. Any day now, we can expect the New York Athletic Commission to learn that the horseless carriage is not a passing fad, that heavier-than-air machines can fly, and that John Brown's body lie a-mouldering in the grave. They're that quick to catch on.

They may kill wrestling, but they'll never reform it. On-the-level wrestling carries all the excitement of a telegraphic chess match. The day they command the boys to turn honest, wrestling will be breathing its last. That is to be feared, because for good, honest comic relief a modern wrestling bout knows no equal.

Ever since Gus Sonnenberg left his feet in a flying tackle 10 years ago and plunged his bull-like head into the tummy of Strangler Lewis, wrestling began to perk up. The flying tackle was the rage, and virtually every rassler adopted it. Then the promoters wired the boys for sound, encouraged their grunts, moans and wails, and the wrestling fever swept the country. They put on a show for their audiences who were not coerced to attend and the fans seem to like it. The New York Athletic Commission, or somebody, is always spoiling the fun.

Subsidy Is Not Confined to Ships and Mail.

STANFORD UNIVERSITY'S student editor urges that football players be paid regular wages, and there is much to be said on both sides. Show me the college that isn't subsidizing its football players in some manner, and I'll show you a college that does not have a good football team.

College heads, even if they are thusly inclined, cannot prevent the recruiting of athletic talent. Where there are alumni or coaches whose jobs depend on the percentage of victories, there is bound to be recruiting or subsidizing. With the alumni it is their desire to see their alma mater win, and with the coaches it is a desire for longer and better contracts.

The college that doesn't send its scouts traipsing about the country in the summer time in search of promising schoolboy material is the college that is not going to have a good football team. Competition has become too great. There was one instance not so many years ago when Georgetown was training at Asbury Park; that is, in point. Georgetown worked out in the morning, Penn worked out in the afternoon on the same field. Two big, towering freshmen whom Lou Little's sco. brought down from the mining country worked out with Georgetown in the morning. That afternoon they worked with Penn. They played with Penn. Somebody had made them a more attractive proposition. A set scale of wages would nullify this type of proselyting.

Payment of regular wages, though, would hardly remedy the ills. There you would have the richest institutions with the most bountiful athletic exchequers corralling the outstanding players, much as the richer big league baseball teams buy the better players. It might give the more-sought young fellows a false sense of worldly values at that tender age.

The present system of subsidization is mostly harmless. I doubt if there are any, or many, college football players getting paid outright. Nominal employment in different forms, with the wages covering tuition and perhaps board, is the usual form of subsidy. In one Eastern college, for example, 12 football-playing postmasters were appointed to distribute the mail, which didn't run to 200 letters a day.

A New Football Dynasty.

MINNESOTA is signalling the rise of a new dynasty in football. With the eclipse of Notre Dame, Michigan, Southern California and Pitt, new teams headed by the Gophers are beginning to rule the realms so long dominated by the afore-mentioned clique.

The sleeping Lion of Columbia, long dormant in the East, was aroused last year by Lou Little's coaching, and Princeton, under Fritz Crisler, was a power in Eastern football for the first time in ten years. Columbia has been beaten this season, but Princeton is carrying on as is Army, which always has been on the fringe of the select.

In the Midwest, both Michigan and Notre Dame have fallen from their high estate. Minnesota and Chicago, long absent from the elite elevens, again are bestirring themselves.

In the South, so long dominated by Tennessee, Tulane, Vanderbilt and Alabama, Duke is rising as a new power. Alabama's Crimson Tide is making gestures to return this season to the lofty place it held during the Rose Bowl campaigns.

On the Coast the situation is scrambled, with Southern California and St. Mary's already beaten. Even at this early date, it will be nothing short of an upset if the Pacific Coast can send an unbeaten representative into the Rose Bowl game against the East.

Tsk, Tsk, Tsk, General Phelan, Matmen Must Work Their Art!

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—It is exceedingly painful for me to have to report that the great politico-militarist statesman, Gen. John J. Phelan, chairman of the New York State Athletic Commission, has made his first mistake since succeeding to that great and glorious springboard from which James J. Farley bounced into the postmastership of these United States.

Ever since Mr. Farley took off from the chair of the local boxing commission and landed in the high place, the General has been bouncing and teethering up and down on the end of the board, looking to be wafted to a position of similar eminence. And I fear that this time he is headed squarely not for promotion, honor and glory, but the soup.

He has cast direct aspersions upon the honesty not only of wrestling but of the wrestlers themselves, those sweet, naive children of nature. In doing so, he has offended hundreds of thousands of voters. Mr. Farley never offended a voter.

The misguided general is tampering with that most dangerous powder—our illusions. As long as wrestling was merely suspected, the populace was content. Here and there an article by some cantankerous sports person casting doubt upon the sincerity of the contestants and the reliability of their competitions merely added a fillip to the wrestling scene. You could go to a match and sit back and enjoy yourself saying—"Whosis says this isn't on the level. But after all, what does whosis know. He's only a sports writer. Hooray! Go on tear his arm off!"

Dream Forever Blasted.

But if the supreme authority, which in this instance is the general, swears that wrestling is false, a snare and a delusion and sets about to prove it, a beautiful dream will be forever blasted. There is no Santa Claus. Madison Square Garden isn't on Madison Square. This wasn't the war to end wars. And wrestling isn't on the level. I strongly advise the general to reconsider.

The general is too literal minded. When a wrestler with a fine show of artistry pantomimes that he is gouging out the eye of his opponent, the general wishes to see the optic on the end of his thumb. I have always found wrestlers to be masters of the theatrical fine art of suggestion. With a grimace, a groan, a rolling of the eyes, a squirm and a writhe, they will make you believe that they are in extremis. They have developed to the nth degree the art of make-believe so that it is no longer make-believe when you see it, but the truth itself.

The Stare of Defeat.

Who, for instance, does not know that just before he triumphs, Jim Londos is within the length of the mustache hair of a gnat from defeat and humiliation? One-thousandth of a second more, one one-hundred-thousandth of an inch closer and both shoulders are to the mat? Apparently everyone but the general. The art of entertainment has rarely been developed to a finer pass than by the wrestlers. It isn't sport, its pure art. The general is a Phillistine.

The general's hasty and inadvised conclusions will lead to no good. If they become fixed, I will have no alternative but to lay before the district attorney certain information I have concerning frauds practiced in two of the city's most distinguished playhouses, in which money is taken from the customers on what are absolutely false pretenses.

At the John Golden Theater an

Defense Is Stressed In Fordham Practice

Strife at End, Colonials to Start Same Men as Faced Tulsa.

GEORGE WASHINGTON'S big, rugged eleven that has brushed aside all but one opponent thus far, lines up against the not so docile Deacons of Wake Forest tonight at Griffith Stadium in the lone grid game scheduled for Washington over the week-end. The kick-off will be at 8 o'clock.

A scoreless tie with Denver is the only smudge on the Colonials' record. Shepherd, The Citadel and Tulsa have felt the sting of its attack and the power of its defense, and tonight it appears that Wake Forest is doomed to the same fate.

Tonight's game fits in with G. W.'s training work for next week's vitally important tussle with Vanderbilt. Then it is that the downtown school will make its 1934 bid for National recognition. Nothing will be used tonight that may be of value to Commodore scouts who will be on the premises, scribbling furiously in their notebooks. Plays or defensive tactics that are to be used against Vandy are taboo.

Boast Heavy Team.

Wake Forest's contribution to the evening's sport will be a heavy team that averages 191 pounds—196 pounds in the line and 186 in the back field—a team that regards the game as an opportunity to add to its prestige at G. W.'s expense.

Pat Swan, 233-pound tackle and captain, is the team's outstanding player. For two years Swan has occupied a position on the All-State honor role and is in line for a third. In the back field the visitors have Walt Kitchin, a good pass thrower, who should give the Colonial secondary plenty of work.

Edens and Swing.

Tex Edens, 200-pound full back, and Stork Swing, elongated end, are a couple of others who should make their presence felt.

George Washington will not be outweighed, however; it has heft, and plenty of it both aft and forward. The internal strife that marred Wednesday's workout was not apparent yesterday, and the insurgents are again in good standing.

Virtually the same line-up that started against Tulsa will take the field tonight, attempt to roll up a few points, and then let the reserves handle the situation.

Saverine Out, Hoyas' Hopes Diminish

Kelliher Also Is Lost for N. Y. U. Game; Team Leaves Today.

GEORGETOWN'S hopes for a fourth consecutive victory tomorrow at New York University's expense sagged perceptibly yesterday under the news that Capt. Joe Saverine had been afflicted with another attack of flu and probably would not be able to perform.

Last week, a few days before the William and Mary struggle, Saverine pulled up with a mild case of the flu and immediately was tucked into bed, but recovered in time to play. But the recurrence of the attack makes his presence in uniform tomorrow extremely doubtful.

With Saverine on the ailing list is Joe Kelliher, the 160-pound guard, who played brilliantly against Manhattan and William and

Guggina, Nicco Signed On Card at Hunt Club

Carl Guggina, Florida featherweight, and Dominick Nicco, nimble New Yorker, yesterday were signed for an eight-round semifinal to the 10-round Frankie Covelli-Pete DeGrasse main event at the Riding and Hunt Club Monday night.

Guggina, in two local ring appearances, has soundly trounced LeRoy Dougan and Joe Grecco. Nicco won on a technical knockout from Eddie Burl at the Auditorium recently.

C. U. Off Today To Encounter Manhattan

Seeks to Avenge 7-0 Loss of Last Year; Wards Against Upset.

A SCALPING party of 31 Catholic University gridmen will leave this afternoon for New York where tomorrow the boys are to perform an important, if not delicate, operation on Manhattan at Ebbets Field.

Hanging in the lonely seclusion of Manhattan's trophy room is a scalp the Cardinals left in the big city last year, cleaved from the Brooklanders by the unerring stroke of a 7-0 victory. Manhattan was considered the underdog in that memorable game, fought on a muddy field, and Manhattan is considered of similar unconsequence again this season—but the Cards will not be caught unawares this time.

To Revise Line-up.

Catholic U. will present a slightly revised line-up tomorrow, with Pete Dranginis starting at quarter back for Gene Augusterfer, who still feels the effects of injuries suffered last week against Baltimore. Al Secino and Tom Gearty will occupy the half back posts and Tom Oliver will start at full back.

Many Battles Seen Hinging On Breaks

By Stuart Cameron.

NEW YORK, Oct. 25 (U.P.).—The boys and girls who spend most of their these days picking football winners for fun and for marbles, money or sports page publication are doing it without any joy this week, the reason being that there are too many games as close as the next minute.

This is one of the climax weeks of the football season and the couple of hundred contests scheduled include literally dozens which are due to be decided on the breaks of the game.

For example: Yale-Army and Harvard-Dartmouth are among the standout games of the Eastern seaboard sector. There are just as many good reasons to believe that Yale will win as for picking the West Pointers. And there are as many reasons for expecting another Harvard defeat as of looking for Dartmouth's first downfall of the season. Well, that's the way it is all over. Anyway, here's the slate on the top contests:

Yale-Army—Our Henry McLemore went up to West Point today and found a deftly drilled Cadet varsity which he expects will be able to take Yale, despite the brilliant aerial attack boasted by the New Havens.

Harvard-Dartmouth—This is just about a Mexican standoff. Dartmouth has run up some 12 points against clubs like Virginia, Norwich and such, and has kept the Green goal line clear. Harvard did about as well until the Crimson played Holy Cross, a real smart outfit, last week, and then took a fine pasting. Dartmouth is the choice because the Green was good enough to tie last year and seems stronger while Harvard is certainly no better.

Ruppert's Approval And Clubs' Waivers Seen as Obtainable

By George Kenny.

The glamorous Babe, most colorful figure in baseball for upward of a decade, whose career as an active player ended with the close of the 1934 season, will succeed Connie Mack.

Mack, the grand old man of the A's, will retire when he, the Babe and the all-star team which they have taken to the Orient for an exhibition tour, return in January. They sailed from Vancouver aboard the Empress of Japan last Saturday.

Mack Nearing Age of 72.

Mack, whose full name—Cornelius McGillicudy—was shortened to the more euphonious Connie Mack even before he became the master mind of the A's at the turn of the century, hinted toward the close of the recent season that he would retire soon. He will be 72 years old in December.

At that time, too, the Babe learned he wouldn't be re-signed as a regular member of the Yankee outfield; that he could continue on the Yankee roster only as a pinch-hitter. But the Babe, the home-run king, declined to remain as a week-end player.

He announced that he would seek a managerial job and indicated that such a post had been offered him. To conceal the real offer, however, he indicated that the team which he had been offered was a National League team, and that he would first have to obtain his release from Col. Jake Ruppert, owner of the Yanks, before he could assume his new duties.

Today it was learned, coincidental with the discovery that the Bam had been offered the throne shortly to be vacated by Mack, that Ruppert would not stand in the Babe's way as long as he continued in the American League.

To Remain in League.

Babe's drawing power, which made him the highest paid baseball player in the history of the game—at $80,000 a year in his heyday—thus will remain an American League possession.

Sunday baseball began in Philadelphia this year. But with the A's going nowhere in the American League race, and the Phillies barely out of the cellar in the National League, the fans remained away from both parks in great numbers.

Field Pilot on Tour.

In order to school the Bam in the Connie Mack system of diamond strategy, he made Babe field manager of the All-Star team on the current tour of the Orient. By the time the jaunt is over, the Babe will have had a thorough course in the Connie Mack methods, and will be ready to blossom forth in his new role as manager.

Just what terms were offered the

Roy Johnson, Ex-Indian, Is Named to Job.

Chicago, Oct. 25 (AP).—First move in the rehabilitation of the Chicago Cubs was made today when Mike Kelly was released as coach and Roy Johnson, manager of the Ponca City Club, of the Western Association, was signed as his successor. Mike Corriden, the other club coach, will continue with the team.

Johnson formerly pitched for the Cleveland Indians and played for several years with Kansas City of the American Association. His success with young ball players at Ponca City impressed Manager Charlie Grimm, of the Cubs, who feels the success of his team depends on rounding up and perfecting youngsters.

Clemson Beats Gamecocks, 19 to 0

COLUMBIA, S. C., Oct. 25 (Spl.). The Clemson Tiger completely overpowered the South Carolina Gamecocks and walked away with a decisive 19-to-0 victory here today in their annual South Carolina State Fair classic.

Led by Capt. Henry Woodward, back, and alternate; Capt. Stan Fellers, end, Clemson romped up and down the field almost at will and smothered every offensive attempt of the Gamecocks.

First Play Nets 25 Yards.

Randy Haison, Bengal back and classed with the greatest of the South, turned in the longest run of the game on the first play when he slashed through tackle for 25 yards. The Gamecocks held for downs on their own 15-yard line, only to have Harry Shore, Tiger guard, intercept a pass and race to the 8-yard line. Again Clemson's runners bogged down and Clemson opened the scoring when Fellers contributed a place-kicked field goal from the 15-yard line.

Only a few minutes later Clemson recovered a Carolina fumble on the Gamecocks' 43-yard line and drove 57 yards to a touchdown, "Slick" McGowan going over from the 1-yard line after Woodward's 15-yard skirt of left end placed the ball in scoring position.

The second and third quarters passed away, with no scoring as the Tigers continued to pile up yardage and Carolina's running attack fizzled out time and again. The great defensive work of Wilburn Clary and Hal Mauney, Gamecocks' two speedy half backs, was the only thing that kept the Tigers from the

Audley Farm Filly Never Headed

Wright Saddle Star of Day, Having Mount on 4 Winners.

By Walter Haight.

THREE years ago, when the Audley Farm sought a name for a frisky little brown filly even then showing promise of speed, those in charge selected Knight's Gal, with the usual play on the names of the sire, Bright Knight and the dam, Ethel Gray. Were they faced with the same task today, they probably would choose "Miss Consistency, Herself," and rest assured that they had not made a mistake.

Yesterday, at nearby Laurel, Knights Gal went through the formality of circling the mile track ahead of five horses to win a glorified $1,000 race, the day's feature. In doing so, Knights Gal ran her ninth straight race without being worse than second. In fact, the filly has been at least second in every start this year, with the exception of her first when she was a close-up fourth.

Second-Place Battle.

True, Knights Gal was credited with only a length-and-a-half margin over Lawsuit and Carabinier 2d, which fought a nosebattle for second honors, but Jockey Kacala could have won by the best part of a city block had he so desired.

The favorite players were in the midst of a string of successes which included Escapade, Palma and Hilise when Knights Gal's race rolled around. Thus they lost no time in rushing the money to the mutuel machines on this standout. When the firing ceased as the horses reached the post, Knights Gal was a 2-5 shot on the approximate odds. After the race a $2.90 mutuel was on display.

In Van All Way.

From No. 1 post position, Knights Gal fairly flew away from the barrier and willingly set the pace. Kalaca rated her along the backstretch well out in front of the others. Lawsuit made a mild bid rounding the stretch turn, but Kalaca let out a notch. In the stretch drive, Knights Gal was only mildly urged.

The strong finisher of the party proved to be Carbinier 2d, with Don Meade in the saddle. The Macomber gelding drove toward the wire and many disagreed with the judges, who ordered Lawsuit's "No. 3" displayed on the results board.

The day's riding honors were garnered by Jockey Wayne D. Wright, who was right. The Western lad piloted four winners. He began with Rustic Cuba at a $15.80 mutuel and, after riding Wishing Star second in the second race, he was first to see the judges with Palma, Hilise and Frumper. Wright, who is riding free-lance, having no contract with a big stable in this section, is considered one of the most promising of the younger set of jockeys in the East.

Mrs. W. E. Shepherd Upsets Miss Robinson, 5 and 4, in Women's Western Golf

Miss Traung Victorious On 20th

Defeats Mrs. Lifur, 1 Up; Mrs. Cheney and Mrs. Jones Also Advance.

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 25 (AP).—In another day of upsets, the Women's Western Golf Championship lost its title holder today and another favorite barely escaped elimination as the tournament moved into the semi-finals.

Miss Dorothy Traung, of San Francisco, another of the tournament's favorites, went to the twentieth hole to defeat Mrs. Gregg Lifur, of Los Angeles, 1 up.

Mrs. Cheney Wins.

Mrs. L. D. Cheney, of San Gabriel, twice a Western champion, alone encountered no difficulty. She defeated Miss Barbara Ransom, of Stockton, Calif., 6 and 5. Miss Ransom displayed none of the form which upset Mrs. Phillip Atwood, of Chicago, yesterday.

Only one player outside California remained in the tournament after the quarterfinals. She was Mrs. Melvin Jones, of Chicago, who defeated Mrs. Mark Steele, San Gabriel, 2 up, after a hard match.

are prime favorites in Gotham. Though Babe is not slated to start, it is a safe wager that he'll be in there before the first half ends.

Reports emanating from New York that several of Chick Meehan's most capable men are on the sidelines with injuries or illness are regarded as "bear stories" by Catholic U.'s coaches. Manhattan, they point out, was supposed to be troubled with injuries last year, and depressed because of a lacing it received the week before it tackled Georgetown.

Manhattan's big threat is Joe Gallagher, the 200-pound lad who does everything but coach. Georgetown could have given C. U. some valuable information on this lad for he was a constant thorn in the collective Hoya sides two weeks ago. The Cards, however, believe they have the right formula to stop him.

Catholic U. needs a victory tomorrow to set the trappings for its big battle a week hence with Western Maryland at Brookland. The Terrors meet St. Thomas tomorrow and should win, so if C. U. hurdles Manhattan it looks like a natural.

Catholic U.'s line tomorrow will have Mulligan and Fleming at ends; Karpowich and Conter, tackles; Anthonavage and Lajousky, guards, and Yanchulis, center.

Byrd said, so far as he knew, no one at the university had raised the question, according to the Associated Press.

Women to Hold Hole-in-One Tourney

By Dave Herman.

SOME 100 women golfers will try their luck next Tuesday at Chevy Chase's course in a hole-in-one tournament, the first of its kind ever put on for feminine players of the District.

Chevy Chase's champion first team will stage the event in compliment to nine other teams that competed in the title series this season.

The 136-yard tenth and the 161-yard thirteenth will be used for the tournament. Women with handicaps up to 10 will fire off from the thirteenth, and those with handicaps of 11 and up will use the tenth. Arrangements, completed yesterday by the Chevy Chase committee, call for a 3-foot and 6-foot circle to be drawn around the two holes. One doesn't necessarily have to hole out to win the chief prize. The closest to the hole will be declared the winner.

To Get But One Shot.

Realizing that too many shots work a psychological disadvantage, the committee has decided that only one shot will be given each contestant. No woman has ever holed out on either the tenth or thirteenth, it is understood.

It will be quite a spectacle when the 100 women start firing away for something that probably doesn't occur but once in a lifetife, if ever. Mrs. Betty Palmer Meckley, Mrs. Jack Scott, Mrs. Roland Mackenzie, Miss Helen Dettweilre, Miss Virginia Pope, Mrs. Don Scott, Mrs. Winnie Faunce, District champion; Mrs. David Clark, Middle Atlantic title holder, and a host of other prominent women golfers will be on hand.

The firing will start at 9:30. The women later will play an 18-hole round at the course.

Ruth to Pilot Macks, Report

Babe is uncertain. But it was indicated that, in addition to a salary comparable to that which the Babe would have accepted had he renewed his contract with the Yankees, Ruth will be given a small block of the Athletic stock.

The one drawback which seemed to stand in the way of the Babe improving his baseball fortunes, the objection of Col. Ruppert, apparently has been overcome.

Wouldn't Stand in Way.

"Col. Ruppert would never stand in the Babe's way if he were offered a managerial post, especially in the American League," an intimate of the Yankee owner stated today.

"He would, of course, ask waivers on the Babe when the time came for Babe's release. But I'm certain that, since his playing days are over, no manager would take the Babe on waiver. And besides, the managers throughout the league like him and wouldn't do anything to interfere with his becoming a manager if he had the chance," the same spokesman explained.

The Babe had hoped to manage the Yankees next year, but Ruppert announced he was perfectly satisfied with the work of Joe McCarthy. In fact, he made it rather plain that if McCarthy were not available, he wouldn't consider Babe for the job.

Mrs. Dowdall, Mrs. Scott In Finals

AN ANTICIPATED finals between mother, Mrs. Agnes W. Bowden, and daughter, Mrs. Roland Mackenzie, failed to materialize yesterday in the Congressional Country Club women's golf championship.

Mrs. Bowden, who upset the hopes of Helen Dettweiler in the first round Wednesday, lost to Mrs. Jack Scott, a former Colorado State champion, 7 and 5. Mrs. Mackenzie bowed to Mrs. J. F. Dowdall in a thrilling 20-hole match.

At 9:40 a. m. today Mrs. Scott and Mrs. Dowdall will clash for the title.

Apparently finding herself after an up-and-down season, Mrs. Scott shot bang-up golf to put out Mrs. Bowden. Mrs. Scott took a healthy lead at the start, and was 5 up at the turn. Completing her round, she scored an 84, with a 40 on the incoming side.

Mrs. Dowdall made a great comeback to defeat Mrs. Mackenzie. Two down and 3 to play, Mrs. Dowdall won the sixteenth with a par 3, halved the seventeenth in 5s, and squared the match by taking the eighteenth with a 4. They halved the nineteenth, and on the tricky twentieth Mrs. Dowdall played three nice shots to the green for her 5 and Mrs. Mackenzie took a 6.

Foe's Habits Detailed.

Georgetown scouts preying on N. Y. U executed their tasks so well the Hilltoppers now know everything but the color of their neckties. Yesterday, pamphlets containing detailed description of the enemy and its habits were distributed, and if anything was left out it was of little consequence.

Coach Hagerty spent most of the afternoon drilling the team against N. Y. U.'s formations, and there are plenty of them. The Violet has a particularly puzzling play that can be used at either end or directly over the line which the Hoyas found difficult to solve.

Georgetown leaves at 4 p. m. today without benefit of a workout. A body of 1,500 students will accompany the squad, all going on a special train.

4 Prep Elevens See Action Today

FOUR Washington prep schools step into gridiron action today. Two of them, Gonzaga and Georgetown Prep, renew an old rivalry at Garrett Park, Md., at 3:15 p. m., in a game which should do much to clarify the race for the mythical prep school championship of the Washington area.

While these two teams are battling, St. John's journeys across the river to meet Washington-Lee at Ballston, Va., at 3:30 p. m. and Landon Prep travels to Hagerstown to play St. James Prep.

Gonzaga's only defeat has been at the hands of Washington-Lee High by a 6-to-0 margin, while it holds victories over Bullis, Roosevelt High and a tie with St. John's.

St. John's is held to have only a fighting chance to beat the Washington-Lee team, which defeated Gonzaga, 9 to 0. The 0-to-0 tie to which St. John's held Gonzaga did a lot to raise the boys' morale, however. Mike Simone, the Johnnies' quarter back, may be unable to see action today. He is suffering from a neck injury.

The Landon line-up facing the Hagerstown team will have Nicholson and Haines, ends; Shirley and West, tackles; Fischer and Case, guards, and Jordon or Brown, center. Lemar Brown will be at quarter back; Capt. Bob Sands, left half; John Paul Randall, right half, and Bill Spalding, full back. It will be Landon's third attempt for a victory. The little school was defeated by St. Andrew's, 26 to 12, and by St. Paul's, of Baltimore, 44 to 0.

Duke Team Off For Tilt With Tennessee

Wade Fears Vols' Aerials; Other Hard Contests in Conference.

RICHMOND, Va., Oct. 25 (AP). Duke's Blue Devils—one of Dixie's few unbeaten teams—moved out of Durham tonight for Saturday's clash with Tennessee's Volunteers with the Devils' claims to National recognition hanging in the balance.

Justly proud of his running attack, Wallace Wade has no worries on that score, but whether Duke can stop the famed Volunteer aerial game is another matter and one about which he professes to be worried.

Other Southern Conference teams had their worries too, most of them in critical games with strong State contenders, with North Carolina and N. C. State clashing at Chapel Hill and Washington and Lee meeting Virginia Tech at Lexington in the morning and Virginia and V. M. I. following in the afternoon.

Terps Plya 'Gators.

St. Johns Ready For American

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Oct. 25 (Spl.). Gridders of St. John's College today practically completed preparations for the game with American University of Washington, to be played here Saturday.

Head Coach M. Talbott Riggs, and his assistant, Valentine Lentz, have devoted their energies the last few days to better handling of the ball by their charges, in view of the decided tendency of fumbling that messed up their play against Swarthmore last Saturday. In spite of this raggedness the Johnnies otherwise displayed potential strength and flashes of good play, to win that engagement 12 to 0.

Cruickshank Tops State Open Field

Shoots 142 to Lead Loving by Three Strokes.

Richmond, Va., Oct. 25 (AP).—Bobby Cruickshank, Richmond pro, shot a 142 today to take a 3-stroke lead on Benny Loving, Petersburg ace, at the halfway mark of the 72-hole State Open golf championship. Cruickshank, defending champion, scored a 72—70, and Loving, starting off with an 8, did a 72—73.

Billy Howell, former Walker Cup star, shot 149 to tie with Rutt Coffey, of Winchester, for fifth place. Chandler Harper, of Portsmouth, recently turned pro, picked up on the sixteenth hole of the afternoon round.

Lipp Bowlers Top Alexandria Loop

Alexandria, Va., Oct. 25 (Spl.). Although, losing three straight tusles to the Health Center quintet last night, the Lipp's Lunch team held its lead in the Alexandria Commercial Bowling League. The Health Center bowled a high team set of 1,628, led by Truman Cowhig's individual set of 361.

High game last night went to Russell Kidwell, who scored 173, one short of the record game of 174 held by Buck Anderson of the Aero Auto Co.

NEW YORK, Oct. 25 (Spl.).—In its last drill at Ohio Field before the Georgetown game on Saturday, the New York University football squad spent an intensive three hours today polishing up on the offensive to be used against the Hoyas.

It is still doubtful that Charlie Siegel, varsity quarter back, will start against Georgetown. An old leg injury has failed to respond to treatment. Smith, stellar Violet full back, who also has been on the injured list, will play on Saturday.

H. Burroughs Rallies, Wins On 21st

Conquers J. H. Barrows in West Potomac Golf Quarterfinals.

A FELLOW may be down, but never out, H. Burroughs, municipal golfer, will tell you, following his 21-hole victory over J. H. Barrows in the quarter-finals of the West Potomac tournament yesterday.

Burroughs had to stage a great rally after being four down to Barrows at the turn. His comeback enabled him to catch Barrows on the eighteenth. They halved the nineteenth and twentieth, and on the twenty-first hole, Burroughs got down in par three figures, while Barrows' best was a four.

Jim Estes entered the quarterfinals by defeating Jim Dillon, on the nineteenth hole. Scat Hansen overcame W. F. Houston, 4 and 2, in his morning match, but bowed to Dr. J. F. Lewis in the afternoon, 2 up.

Play in the men's championship will be resumed today, while in the women's division, Francis Bailey will clash with Hope Wilkinson and Ellen Kincaid will oppose Mrs. Robert Stevinson.

Women golfers of the Manor Club will hold their annual meeting today, and are expected to elect Mrs. Howard J. Simons as chairman. Mrs. Simons also is tournament chairman of the District Women's Golf Association. A handicap tournament will be staged in the morning.

Reeve Lewis, jr., and Henry Ravanel today will play off their oft-postponed finals for the President's Cup at Chevy Chase.

Golfers from the Optimist Club will mobilize today at Indian Spring for their annual tournament. Prizes will be given for low gross and low net.

Fordham-S. M. U.—Here's one of those real close ones, with the nod going to S. M. U. Fordham pointed to St. Mary's and lost, and with that game probably lost some of its gimp.

Iowa-Minnesota—Best game of the Midwest and one of the two best of the day—the other being Stanford-U. S. C. Our George Kirksey wires in from Chicago with a prediction that Minnesota should win, but adds, "it won't be by more than a whisker and Iowa may upset them."

Stanford-U. S. C.—Here's another tough one. Stanford, on form and record, is the favorite, but U. S. C. should be finding itself some time.

Holy Cross-Colgate—Holy Cross, gunning for a shot at the Rose Bowl, will shoot the works at a good team—good despite its loss to Ohio State.

Washington-California—Ranks with Stanford-U. S. C. on top of West Coast program, and Washington is doped to win.

N. Y. U.-Georgetown—N. Y. U. is in a winning stride.

Alabama-Georgia—'Bama.

Notre Dame-Wisconsin—Notre Dame easily.

And—Illinois over Michigan, Ohio State over Northwestern, L. S. U. over Vanderbilt, Duke over Tennessee, Columbia over Penn State, Chicago over Missouri.

WASHINGTON'S own version of Army-Navy football rivalry will be offered Sunday when the Seaman Gunners and National Guards blast away at one another on the Navy Yard field. The game marks their first meeting on the gridiron and is the beginning of what is hoped will be a long and colorful series.

The contest will be staged in keeping with the spirit and tradition of all service games. The Navy band will lead a parade of contingents representing the rivals before the kick-off and organized cheering sections will lend a collegiate atmosphere to the proceedings.

Long an established factor in local sandlot football ranks, the Gunners are favored to stop the khaki-clad eleven, although a hard, well-played game is expected. The Gunners played a 6 to 6 tie with the champion Marion gridders last week.

Coached by Burke.

Everett Burke, star quarter back at Washington and Lee when Tex Tilson, now coaching the Generals, was a half back, coaches the Guardsmen. His assistant is Scudder Darragh, who aided Hugo Bezdek at Penn State in 1928. Getting the pigskin rolling has been a gigantic task inasmuch as the local unit does not have an athletic fund.

Bob Martin, who played at Texas A. & M., and who tips the scales at 215 pounds; "Mac" McGahey, an end, who kicks and passes from either side, and Larry Lindever, a guard, are the team's outstanding players.

Coming along at a merry clip with a strictly all-sand-lot roster, the Southeast Boys Club has visions of occupying the spot formerly held by the Mohawks in the hearts of Southeast Washington fans. Coached by Bob McVean, former Catholic University star, the boys have patterned their attack after that of the Cardinals, and execute their plays with effective dispatch. Russell Hildebrand, manager, is bringing the team along at a careful pace with an eye to 1936, when he believes it will be big and strong enough to step up into the unlimited class. At the moment it is playing 135-pound ball.

This season the boys are undefeated, untied and unscored on in four games. Their most notable successes were achieved against the Quantico Marines and St. Rita's, of Alexandria. Apache Preps, a strong neighborhood rival, and Arlington Athletic Club also have been defeated.

Don Hunt, a half back, is the outstanding player, if one can be singled out. He punts 40 yards consistently and has gotten off a couple of 60-yard boots. Johnny de George and Francis Monaco also rate well on the sandlots.

One of the most important games scheduled Sunday will be played at Benning (Gonzaga Field) where the champion Marions and Palace gridmen square off. Winners of the National City League for two consecutive years, the Marions lost a 6-0 decision to their Southwest rivals last year in a post-season game and are bent on avenging that defeat.

If any team has confidence in its ability it is the Marions. Last Sunday Coach Chibby Rice's men drained the treasury—the entire $25—to wager on their game with Seaman Gunners. It resulted in a deadlock. But they're willing to do the same thing again this week.

Hike Licarione's return to the line-up will bolster the team considerably. Coach Mike Scanlon, of Palace, will use the same eleven men who upset Maryland A. C.

Off for Princeton.

Ithaca, N. Y., Oct. 25 (AP).—After a light drill the Cornell squad of 32 players entrained for the game at Princeton Saturday. All the regulars were included.

Shakeup in Grid Officiating Is Reported on Way

By Edward J. Neil
(Associated Press Sports Writer).

THE time has come, the walrus said, to talk of many things, and whether the graduate managers around the Eastern wheel, or Walter E. Okeson, commissioner of Eastern football, officials, like the idea, there's going to be a great deal said about officiating before this season is over.

Considerable has been said already. Dr. Eddie O'Brien, a capable official, violated the unwritten law of the union by talking to a newspaperman, and informing him of the black list most of the big Eastern universities keep right up to the moment. On the surface, the appointment of Commissioner Okeson at $7,500 a year to assign officials to all big games was to eliminate all that. Actually, the way it works out, instead of eliminating the black listing of officials for one reason or another, the appointment of a commissioner only made it possible to make black listing more complete.

For years Eastern officiating has been in the hands of Okeson and a small clique of officials, some good, some ordinary, some downright bad and getting worse as the years brought on added poundage, dimmed sight, sharpened tempers, and rocketed egotism.

But they can't break into the charmed circle. The old guard continues to march on, an oligarchy fostered by the universities themselves. They've gotten so bad now, though, that something must be done. On one Saturday I saw the biggest intersectional game in the East slaughtered as a spectacle by a referee who didn't even know that two successive incomplete passes over the goal line meant a touchdown.

Youngsters can't break into the big games because membership in the Eastern Coaches Association requires that you have worked in four college varsity games in one season. If these young graduates get any assignments at all, after writing letters to the commissioner that are rarely answered, after getting their old coaches to write, putting on pressure through friends, the total is never more than three varsity games in one season.

"The association especially desires your cooperation in the elimination of newspaper interviews," reads the card Okeson sends to each official notifying of his formal appointment to work a game. After the games, the card invites each official to tell the commissioner of any discord that may have developed among the officials during the afternoon, and why, and what the clashes of opinion were.

Before the fall assignment sheets are made up in March of each year, the colleges have a chance to object to officials who haven't come up to their standards in the past. It is a known fact that one ground for objection in several major institutions is calling 'em wrong against the home forces in the pinches. If the college objects to an official, that's that. There's no rebuttal.

It's "Yes, sir, Mr. Graduate Manager. Certainly Mr. Graduate Manager. Of course, Mr. Graduate Manager."

The golf pros of this country, who have been living on a streak-of-fat and streak-of-lean diet for a long time, are at present licking their chops at the prospect of a share-in-the-dough plan for the coming winter. An attractive proposition in connection with the world's richest tournament has been referred to them and they're voting 6 to 1 in favor of it.

Summer is kind to your golf pro. He rambles over the meadows, sits in the shadow of a stately elm, or plays "down the hatch" in the locker room. At the first rattle of winter all this changes. A few top-notchers scurry for the Southland and manage to make expenses in tournament play. The rest—well, how do they get along?

This winter a new deal is promised for the vast number of unsung and unrewarded home club professionals. Col. Henry L. Doherty, president of the Florida Year-Round Clubs and sponsor of the Miami Biltmore $10,000 Open, who in the past two years has contributed $35,000 in Florida golf purses, now has contributed a persuasive idea for spreading out the benefits of the winter play so that more pros can afford to hit the big-time trail in the off season. His suggestion is to split the Miami Biltmore $10,000 purse into two $5,000 sections—one to be reserved for the stars who have been plucking the big purses year in and year out; the other to be divvied among the erstwhile stay-at-homes who have been either too tied down to play winter golf or discouraged because they couldn't make their expenses around the loop.

Eastern, Western, Both Unbeaten in Series and Evenly Matched, Clash Today

Huck Wynne Is Seen Key To Result

Veteran May Not Start for Georgetowners; Others Lost.

By John R. Vosburgh.

THE 1934 interhigh series finds Eastern meeting Western today, despite Mr. Kipling's lines that "never the twain shall meet." The game could easily prove one of the crucial contests of the championship race. Both schools have yet to be defeated in series competition and appear to be as evenly matched as two teams possibly could be.

Eastern, safely past Tech, which it held to a scoreless tie, feels it has a fine chance of at least tying for the title, while Western, with its strongest team in years, is heading full-tilt in the same direction.

The result of today's game, scheduled for Central Stadium at 3:30 p. m., possibly hinges on whether Huck Wynne, Western's veteran left end, is able to play. The hardy wingman, who captained the Georgetowners last year, fell suddenly ill Wednesday afternoon and was forced to leave his classes and go home. He spent yesterday in bed with a fever.

Coach Dan Ahearn yesterday attached considerable importance to the prospect of Wynne being out of the line-up. Western's chances drop immeasurably if his star is unable to play.

Schleicher Is Out.

Western also faces the absence of Dick Schleicher, guard, from its lineup. Schleicher is definitely on the sidelines with a severely sprained ankle received in the Roosevelt game. Ed Lloyd probably will get the call for the berth, with Bill Shelton the alternate choice. If Wynne is unable to play, Western will have Bill Farquhar on the left wing, a big, fast but green end.

Eastern will be without the services of its star Filipino back, Billy Cattell, who has been declared ineligible. Coach Charlie Guyon said Bernie Copper, a fast ball-carrier and the best punter on the squad, is the probable choice for Cattell's left-half post. A couple of other likely-looking youngsters, Kidwell and Miller, are certain to see action, the coach said.

Wrestlers Must Work Their Art

actor named Joseph Spurn-Calleia shoots another actor named Allan Hale, and is himself shot before the end of the evening by a third actor named Joe King.

At the Music Box a lady by the name of Miss Jessie Royce Landis hurls acid into the face of a fellow player, a Miss Muriel Williams.

I happen to know that both Mr. Spurin-Calleia and Mr. Hale are walking around the streets of the city today, unharmed and hearty, and Miss Williams, too, may be seen at her home, without a blemish on her features.

These tricksters are using blank cartridges in their weapons to bilk the unsuspecting public, and the iodine hurled by the lady in question is some harmless solution. I can prove this and will prove it if the general does not drop his muckraking campaign against a beautiful and worth-while art. If the wrestlers are not to be permitted their little illusions to entertain the public, then it is time to shut down on all fakers.

Does the general believe that rabbits dwell in plug hats, that the gentleman in the swallow-tailed coat actually swallows the burning cigars and cigarettes, that the lady who is sawed in half is immediately carted away to the nearest boneyard and is there interred? Many, many years ago, when general was a little boy and Santa Claus came down the chimney, the general must have taken a yank at his whiskers and discovered that it was his old man. Tsk, tsk, tsk!

We are always getting these strange psychological cases on the commission thrones. The late William Muldoon was a fanatic on the subject of cigaroots smoking. The general doesn't believe in fairies.

MISS GERTRUDE TELSHAW AND CHARLIE.

CHARLIE stayed out too late one evening, seeing the night life of Kissimmee River, Fla., and now he'll pay the fiddler as mascot of the University of Florida football team.

Charlie doesn't know yet exactly what life does hold for him, but he will, beginning tomorrow, when he is to be presented by his proud captor to the captain of the Florida team.

Charlie was living the life of a contented baby alligator in the tepid water of the Kissimmee in Polk County, one night two weeks ago when a pair of strong young hands grabbed him by the nape of his neck and lifted him out of his playground. Charlie owes his life to his youth. If he had been a bit bigger, a few years older, they'd have shot him in self defense.

Is Awaiting Team.

He's in Washington, now, awaiting the arrival of the Florida 'Gators, who play the University of Maryland in Baltimore tomorrow. Charlie doesn't like the change in climate. It makes him sleepy. Charlie's only 2 years old, you know, and he misses those day-long naps in the tropical waters of Florida.

H. L. Reynolds, a Floridian in the Government employ here, who captured Charlie, named Charlie Charlie quite arbitrarily. Charlie's sex is unknown to his owner. Only experts on reptile life can determine the gender of an alligator. Reynolds says he might just as well have named him Emma and been correct.

Named After Seminole.

Charlie's full name is "Shirt-Tail Charlie," in compliment to the well-known Seminole Indian character. "Shirt-Tail Charlie" is the Seminole who killed his wife and was sentenced by a tribal tribunal to wear no trousers for the rest of his natural life. His shirt tails, thus, are worn abnormally long.

D. C. Teams Win Confidence Of Fans in Football Contest

IF Washington college elevens fail to win their fames this Saturday it will not be because they are lacking the backing of the majority of Capital football fans. Contest entrants in The Postillion Football contest are almost unanimous in their selection of local teams. Virtually without exception, Catholic U. and Georgetown are selected. While Maryland is given heavy vote of confidence many persons are checking Florida as their selection.

Again yesterday the Postillion Contest elicited hundreds of entries from Washington fans who are testing their football knowledge or occult powers, as the case may be. To the fan selecting the greatest number of winners among the 26 games listed below, The Post will award four choice seats to the George Washington-Vanderbilt game at Griffith Stadium one week from next Saturday.

On Saturday night, Harris B. Hull, The Postillion broadcaster, will include the scores of the game in his radio program conducted over Station WMAL.

To the fan with the second largest number of correct predictions will be given three seats to the same game. To the fan who places third, fourth, fifth and sixth two choice seats will be given.

Field Goal Successful.

The Tigers came back in the fourth quarter to duplicate the first, receiving a punt in mid-field and with Capt. Henry Woodward carrying the brunt of the offensive drive the Bengals moved down to Carolina's 15. As line plays were halted Fellers contributed another field goal from the 24.

Late in the fourth quarter as Carolina desperately flung pass after pass, the Tiger ball hawks intercepted no less than six. One resulted in a touchdown when Yarborough, Clemson center, was downed with a Carolina pass on the 50. Two running plays gained 25 yards and a roughness penalty backed the Gamecocks to their 10. Woodward sailed through right tackle untouched for the final score.

Washington Boy Plays.

Lawrence Buscher, Tiger guard from Washington, D. C., substituted for Inabinet midway the fourth quarter and furnished the Bengal backs with some effective interference and played a stellar defensive game.

75-Year-Old Golfer Seeks to Lower His Score.

FRUITA, Colo., Oct. 25 (AP).—Probably the person least excited over the new record for Fruita's nine-hole golf course is the man who set it, W. F. (Bill) Bunce, 75-year-old blacksmith. Bunce said he'd break his own mark next year. He scored a 30, 5 under par and 2 better than the existing mark. A hole-in-one helped Bunce, playing his fourth season of golf.

Massanutten Opposes Glassboro High Eleven

Woodstock, Va., Oct. 25 (Spl.). The Massanutten gridders will face Glassboro High School, of Glassboro, N. J., on Siebert Field Saturday.

The Purple and Gold will be handicapped by the loss of several regulars who were injured when the West Virginia Freshman eleven smothered them, 33-0, at Morgantown last Saturday. Shaver, half back; Keltz, last year's captain, and guard, are among those on the sidelines.

Brother of the Blue Monday Gridiron Guessers Revealed

THE Monday morning "quarter backs" who never lose a game second-guessing the home town coach's strategy in Saturday's losing contest have a blood brother in a one-time Syracuse fourth-string freshman signal caller Lew Andreas tells about.

The freshmen had rushed to the 2-yard line but apparently were stalled there. Andreas, fearful they would fail to score and detecting a flaw in his quarter back's with the goal still two yards away. tactics, called over the fourth stringer, hurriedly instructed him on what play to call and sent him into the game.

The Syracuse Freshmen by that time had used up three downs

The fourth stringer went in, barked the signals and to Andreas' astonishment and chagrin called an entirely different play than he had been told—lost two yards and the ball.

Andreas, angered, took the boy out and asked him why he had not done what he was told.

Wins at Soccer.

Westminster, Md., Oct. 25 (Spl.). The Western Maryland College soccer team scored the first win of the season here yesterday afternoon by defeating Franklin and Marshall College, Lancaster, Pa., 2 to 1.

Soccer Title Clinched By Bruce High School

Cumberland, Md., Oct. 25 (Spl.). Although held to a 2-2 tie by Allegany High yesterday at Campobello, Bruce High, of Westernport, scored enough points for the season to clinch the Western Maryland Interscholastic League soccer championship for the fifth successive year.

Not only did the Westernport eleven capture the county title but it also equaled the record established by Barton High School when the latter won seven county championships from 1920 to 1926 inclusive. Beall, of Frostburg, has won two pennants and Central, of Lonaconing was winner once.

Stocks Retreat On News of Cut In Earnings

New York, Oct. 25 (AP).—The stock market retreated hastily today after efforts to extend a rally had encountered stiff resistance in early trading.

Realities in the way of lower earnings by major corporations and profit-taking in rail shares following their sharp advance in the preceding session offset better feeling generated by President Roosevelt's address to the American Bankers Association.

Weakness cropped out early in Consolidated Gas on a dividend omission by one of its subsidiaries, the New York Steam Corporation. It spread later to most sections of the list. Rails yielded the greater part of their rally gains.

Trading Volume Jumps.

With trading brisk around the opening, as well as on the decline in late dealings, turnover expanded to 1,028,070 shares, the largest in two weeks, compared with 772,300 yesterday.

The Standard Statistics Co. average for 90 selected stocks dipped 1.7 points to 70.9, more than eliminating the gain on the previous upturn.

Traders switched to the selling side of stocks after the market had failed around the opening to get through the upper confines of the narrow range it has occupied in recent weeks.

Rail Enthusiasm Cools.

Enthusiasm for rails cooled overnight after further consideration had been given to the Federal court decision holding the railway pension bill unconstitutional. Santa Fe yielded 3½ points and Union Pacific 4¼.

Losses of 1 to about 3 points were recorded for Atlantic Coast Line, New York Central, Delaware & Hudson, Pennsylvania and Northern Pacific, despite expressions of rail men hailing the decision as a welcome relief.

Among prominent industrials, U. S. Steel, Westinghouse, Bethlehem Steel, General Motors, Chrysler, Montgomery Ward, Sears, Roebuck, Union Carbide and Allied Chemical finished about 1 to 2 points lower.

On Losing List.

Consolidated Gos sold off 2 points and within a fraction of its 1934 low. Aside from the failure of its steam subsidiary to declare a dividend, the parent company reported third-quarter earnings equivalent to about 7 cents a share, compared with 34 cents in the corresponding period last year.

News that Bethlehem Steel directors had not continued the $1.75 dividend declared on the preferred at the previous meeting did not come out until after the close of the market. The stock closed 1¾ lower. In contrast with the moderate profit shown for the second three months, Bethlehem reported a deficit of $2,400,126 for the third quarter.

The General Motors' third-quarter report, also published after the close of the market, revealed net earnings equivalent to 48 cents a share, against 71 cents in the September quarter, 1933.

President Roosevelt's address and other developments at the bankers' convention evoked friendly and favorable comment in financial quarters, but it was noted that the questions of a balanced budget and currency stabilization had not been answered definitely, and that the American Bankers Association, in a resolution, had called for a balance betweeen Government income and expenditures.

New York, Oct. 25.—Prospects for corporate profits during the coming year are now regarded as far less bright by many close business observers than those for a further recovery in the volume of business.

This pessimism over the outlook for profits persists despite the general reassurances uttered by President Roosevelt in his address last night before the American Bankers Association. It continues also despite the decision of the District of Columbia Supreme Court in the Railroad Retirement Act case, which may, if upheld by the United States Supreme Court, prevent Federal unemployment insurance legislation at the coming session of Congress.

This pessimism had been reflected during the past fortnight in the sagging tendency of industrial common stocks, despite steady buying of shares by those who entertain vague fears of future "inflation" possibilities. Such "inflation" buying has doubtless been an important sustaining influence in the stock market in the face of the clouded outlook for profits.

Earnings reports for the third quarter of this year, now coming to hand, in a number of cases give concrete confirmation to the fears of those who have shared the prevailing pessimism over the outlook for corporate profits. Many concerns did a larger volume of business, but made less money. One of the most extreme cases was General Motors. This giant concern has had its margin of profit cut almost in half as a result of New Deal influences. It did 60 per cent more business in the second quarter of this year than in the corresponding period in 1933, but it actually showed somewhat smaller net profits.

Profit Margin Is Reduced To 12.3 Per Cent in '34.

Its profit margin, including income from investments, was 21.5 per cent of gross sales in the second quarter of 1933. The margin was only 13.3 per cent this year, despite the fact that the big expansion in volume would normally have permitted an increase in the profit margin.

The more important factors which are held likely to reduce the margin of profit for corporations generally are:

1. Renewed agitation in Congress for the shorter work week.

While it is doubted that a uniform 30-hour bill will be enacted, new attempts to reduce unemployment through application of the "spread the work" principle are held a foregone conclusion. The new legislation that will replace the National Industrial Recovery Act, which expires by limitation next June, will probably provide for this.

Radical sentiment throughout the country, according to a recent check by one Wall Street house, is shifting in substantial measure from support for monetary inflation proposals to advocacy of the shorter work week.

Increases in unit wage costs under the NRA codes have been the chief cause of the dwindling margin of profit of many corporations to date. A further reduction in working hours, without corresponding declines in wages paid per worker, would increase production costs. A larger volume of business, recent experience has shown, seldom offsets the adverse effect on profits of such a rise in unit wage cost.

Furthermore, the proposal to fix a minimum annual wage for industry regardless of the number of hours worked during the year by individual employes, advanced by President Roosevelt, would contribute to raising operating expenses. Shorter hours also impair efficiency of operation, industrialists claim, while they may bring about a shortage of skilled labor in certain fields where unemployment is now quite small.

2. Abandonment of production control, price fixing and many other "fair practice" provisions in codes of fair competition.

A report to this effect from the National Industrial Recovery Board is expected momentarily. Such a removal of many or all of the curbs on competition imposed under the codes will release pent-up competitive energies, and thus result in a spell of severe price-cutting in many lines.

In time, of course, trade association activities, mergers and similar traditional measures will again reduce the intensity of business rivalry, but only after a lower general level of prices of manufactured goods has been established. Natural resource industries alone seem likely to prove an exception to such a return to freer competition, to which present Administration policies point.

The objective of this policy, as indicated by the President's fireside address, is to expand consumption through lower prices, thus furnishing opportunities for increased employment.

3. The proposal to inaugurate a comprehensive plan of social insurance, to be paid for in large part, if not entirely, by industry.

The Wagner-Lewis bill, introduced in the last session of Congress, imposed a tax of 5 per cent of payrolls upon employers who did not contribute at least a similar amount to a State unemployment insurance fund. This would be tantamount to a reduction in the marging of profit of many concerns by 5 per cent of annual payrolls.

4. Additional labor unrest, resulting in new and costly strikes.

A further shortening of hours would stimulate unrest among workers, industrialists feel. Able-bodied employes will not be satisfied with a further cut in working hours, they say, even if no lowering in the contents of pay envelopes accompanies the move. Higher unit wage costs will mean higher prices, and that means a lower real standard of living, in terms of what money wages will buy.

Bond Market Gains Fraction; Tone Steady

Prime Loans Close Higher as Sales Drop to $12,906,000.

New York, Oct. 25 (AP).—The bond market displayed a fairly steady tone today despite weakness of stocks and a lower trend of U. S. Government securities.

Most prime investment loans managed to close slightly higher on the day, although the trading volume was considerably lighter than in the previous session.

Transfers totaled $12,906,000, par value, against $18,204,000 yesterday. The Standard Statistics Co. average for 60 domestic corporate bonds was up one-tenth of a point at 84.8.

Effect of Speech.

Just what effect the President's speech to the bankers had on the market was a matter of argument. As a whole, the financial community was inclined to place a favorable construction on the sentiments expressed by the Chief Executive although it was regretted in some quarters that he was unable to clarify the budgetary and monetary situations.

Earnings reports of Bethlehem Steel, Consolidated Gas and other important corporations appeared after the close of trading and these were generally viewed as disappointing.

The majority of Federal loans showed recessions of one-thirty-second to six-thirty-seconds of a point, but the turnover in this list fell to $3,300,000, compared with $10,240,000 on Wednesday. Liberty 3½s were slightly firmer and several issues were unchanged.

Higher prices were recorded by some loans of American Telephone, Alleghany Corporation, Armour & Co., Certain-teed, Chicago Great Western, Rock Island, General Steel Castings, International Great Northern, International Telephone, Northern Pacific, Pacific Gas, Postal Telegraph, Frisco, United Drug and Western Union.

On Losing List.

Declines of 1 to around 2 points were suffered by various bonds of Southern Pacific, New Haven, Nickel Plate, Erie, Chicago & Western Indiana, St. Paul and Great Northern. Bethlehem Steel and Consolidated issues were only slightly recessionary.

On the curb Baldwin Locomotive 6s broke some 20 points to 81 following decision of the directors to pay interest on the first mortgage bonds of the company outstanding in the hands of the public, but not to pay on the bonds held in the sinking fund. Operating losses, it was disclosed, were continuing. Foreign obligations were quiet and moderately irregular.

Curb's Prices Fail to Rise; Volume Gains

Alcohols Turn Heavy as Trading Advances to 166,000 Shares.

New York, Oct. 25 (AP).—The curb market gave up most of the improvement registered in the previous session today. Volume increased in late selling. Alcohols were particularly heavy.

Price changes were narrow during the forenoon, but in the last hour the general list was under pressure.

Hiram Walker and Distillers Corporation-Seagrams dipped about 2 each. Singer Manufacturing was off 3 points in a meager transfer. Humble Oil and Parker Rust Proof lost more than a point each.

Fractional recessions appeared in American Cyanamid "B," Electric Bond & Share, Pioneer Gold, Swift Internacionale, Swift & Co., International Petroleum and Pittsburgh Plate Glass. Lake Shore and Creole Petroleum were resistant, while Mead Johnson closed up a point net.

Transfers approximated 166,000 shares, compared with 117,000 Wednesday.

Goods Markets.

New York, Oct. 25 (AP).—Some price irregularity developed on gray goods and some finished cotton goods lines today due to sales pressure and some second-hand offerings. Men's wear lines were firmer on moderate sales. Rayon weaving yarns sold in moderate lots for November delivery. Strikes in the silk dyeing division unsettled gray cloth markets. Goods in finished state were in fair demand. Burlaps were firmer.

Wheat Values Slump After Slight Upturn

Selling and Profit Taking Follow Slowing Up in Buying.

Chicago, Oct. 25 (AP).—Sharp breaks in grain values took place today notwithstanding earlier slight upturns that were associated more or less with President Roosevelt's address to bankers.

Failure of wheat buying to assume broad volume led to augmented selling pressure and to execution of numerous stop-loss orders from disappointed holders.

Ensuing downturns of wheat prices were accelerated by a reaction in foreign markets.

Wheat Closes Weak.

After a maximum fall of 2⅛ cents, wheat closed weak, 1⅝ to 2 cents under yesterday's finish; May, 96¼ to 96⅜; corn, ½ to 1 cent down; May, 76¼ to 76 ⅜; oats, ⅞ to 1½ cents off, and provisions exactly unchanged.

Helping the Chicago wheat market upward at the opening were Argentine reports of light frosts in Cordoba Province, Western Santa Fe, Western Buenos Aires and the Pampas. Simultaneously, a dispatch from Santiago, Chile, told of the lowest temperatures in 80 years.

There was also an Argentine official report mentioning excessive moisture and fears of rust. On the other hand, the Buenos Aires wheat market made no appreciable response to these bullish factors, and Liverpool wheat quotations fell back after early firmness.

Quick Seizing of Profits.

Quick seizing of profits on wheat price advances here led soon to a general downturn trend that precipitated heavy liquidating sales in the final hour, with the market showing but little power to rally. About the sole new encouragement for bulls at this stage was considerable buying that appeared to come from milling sources when prices underwent pronounced setbacks.

No rain of consequence was witnessed in domestic wheat territory where moisture is needed.

Corn, oats and rye sympathized with wheat weakness. A cargo of Canadian barley was reported to have been worked to the United States today. Despite hog market downturns, provisions were steadied by liberal purchasing of lard for cash houses.

Wheat Crop in Argentina Is Reported Satisfactory

Buenos Aires, Oct. 25 (AP).—The Agricultural Statistic Bureau reported the wheat crop satisfactory today, but belated frost may develop mildew.

Flax and forage were reported excellent and the corn good, but the fruit crop was underdeveloped. The finance ministry determined to help the wool producers by buying their drafts from the purchasers at sale prices to be fixed by the exchange bureau, less 5 per cent to go into a fund to cover possible losses.

German Currency Coverage.

Berlin, Oct. 25 (AP).—The gold and foreign exchange coverage of German currency was unofficially reported today as increasing from 2.26 to 2.41 per cent in the Reichsbank during the last week.

Abigail Adams, daughter of a New England clergyman named William Smith, was the first mistress of the White House. She was the wife of one President and the mother of another. The first, John Adams, was inaugurated in 1797, serving until 1801, when he retired after his defeat by Thomas Jefferson and Aaron Burr in the Presidential race of 1800. The President who was the son of Abigail Adams was John Quincy Adams, sixth President of the United States, who was elected in 1824 to begin his term March 4, 1825.

Copper, because of its cheapness, is an unsatisfactory metal for coinage—even the familiar one-cent piece in American money represents but a small fraction of a cent in actual value as metal. Yet the Swedish government once undertook to coin copper money in 10-daler pieces—these "coins" were 10 by 14 inches and half an inch thick.

The word "coffee" in English is an adaptation of the Arabian word "gahwah" or Turkish "qahveh," meaning "wine." The Turks pronounce it "kahveh." "Coffee" came into use in the English language at the close of the sixteenth century.

Outlook for Peace Seen Discouraging

'But It Can Be Gotten,' Says MacDonald.

London, Oct. 25 (AP).—Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, in his first address since he returned from vacation in Canada, tonight declared the outlook for world peace "rather discouraging," but asserted "we can get peace in our time if we have an intelligent population backing up our efforts."

A distinguished audience at the Peace Society, including United States Ambassador Robert W. Bingham, heard the prime minister say Great Britain held to her determination to advance disarmament by keeping her navy below treaty limits "until the conclusion was plainly written in front of us."

In defense of the League of Nations, the prime minister said the fact that it gave an opportunity to the world's premiers and foreign secretaries to meet each other justified its existence.

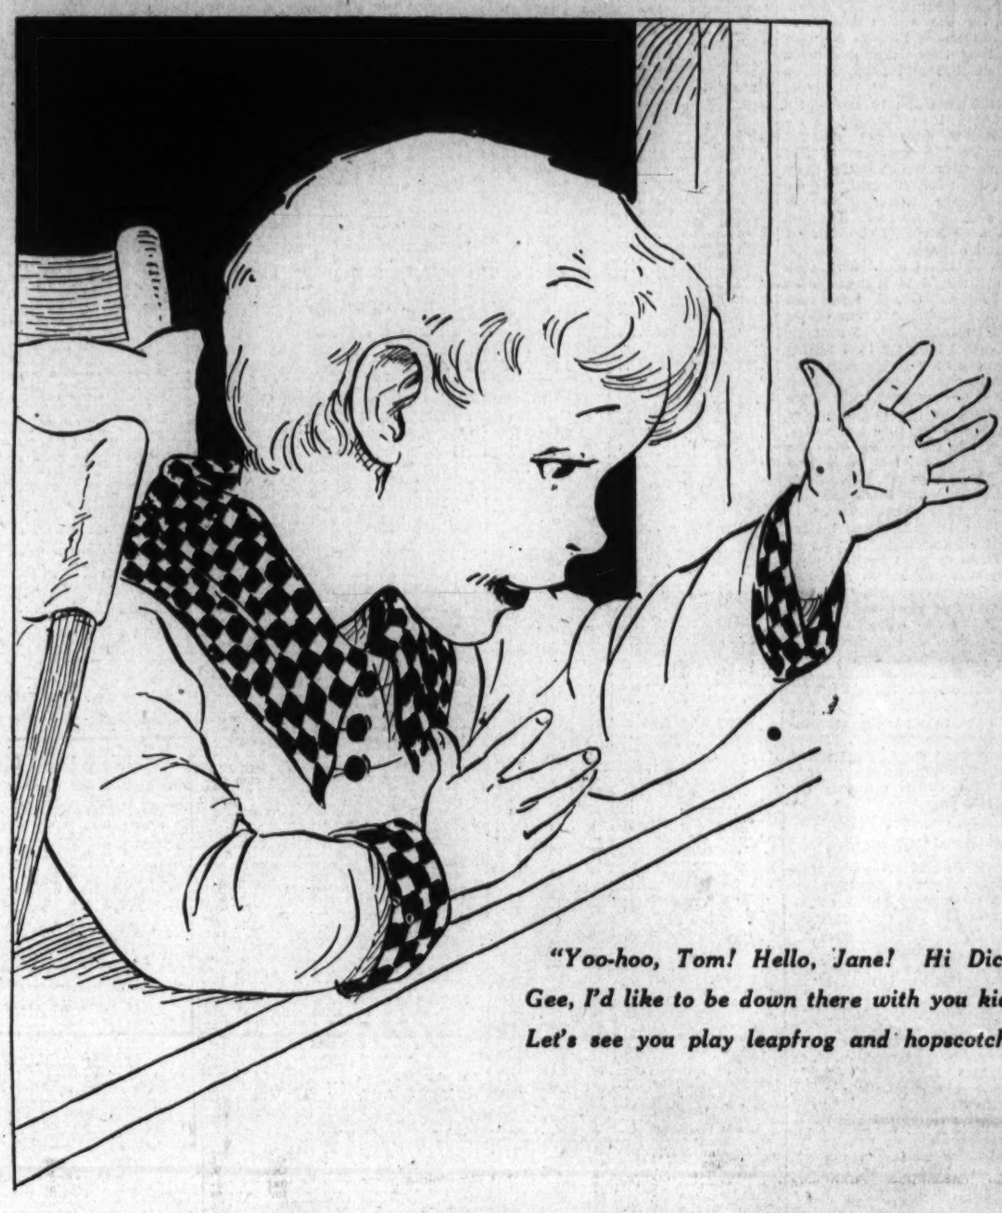
DENNIE

Apple Mary's Grandson



"Yoo-hoo, Tom! Hello, Jane! Hi Dick! Gee, I'd like to be down there with you kids. Let's see you play leapfrog and hopscotch."

A Shut-In Watching Sidewalk Sports While Gran'ma Tends Her Apple Cart

Blonde, blue-eyed Dennie waits patiently for the day when he may join his little friends in play . . . money and an operation impede the road to his full recovery . . . so Gran'ma, affectionately called "Apple Mary," labors with her apple cart to make it possible . . . her one thought is to see little Dennie healthy and strong again.

From the maelstrom of city streets, from the depths of a loving grandmother's heart for a motherless, crippled lad, the story of Apple Mary and Dennie sweeps from the scintillating pen of Martha Orr, brilliant girl-cartoonist.

Wheat Values Slump After Slight Upturn

Selling and Profit Taking Follow Slowing Up in Buying.

Chicago, Oct. 25 (AP).—Sharp breaks in grain values took place today notwithstanding earlier slight upturns that were associated more or less with President Roosevelt's address to bankers.

Failure of wheat buying to assume broad volume led to augmented selling pressure and to execution of numerous stop-loss orders from disappointed holders.

Ensuing downturns of wheat prices were accelerated by a reaction in foreign markets.

Wheat Closes Weak.

After a maximum fall of 2⅛ cents, wheat closed weak, 1⅝ to 2 cents under yesterday's finish; May, 96¼ to 96⅝; corn, ½ to 1 cent down; May, 76¼ to 76 ⅝; oats, ⅞ to 1½ cents off, and provisions exactly unchanged.

Helping the Chicago wheat market upward at the opening were Argentine reports of light frosts in Cordoba Province, Western Santa Fe, Western Buenos Aires and the Pampas. Simultaneously, a dispatch from Santiago, Chile, told of the lowest temperatures in 80 years.

There was also an Argentine official report mentioning excessive moisture and fears of rust. On the other hand, the Buenos Aires wheat market made no appreciable response to these bullish factors, and Liverpool wheat quotations fell back after early firmness.

Quick Seizing of Profits.

Quick seizing of profits on wheat price advances here led soon to a general downturn trend that precipitated heavy liquidating sales in the final hour, with the market showing but little power to rally. About the sole new encouragement for bulls at this stage was considerable buying that appeared to come from milling sources when prices underwent pronounced setbacks.

No rain of consequence was witnessed in domestic wheat territory where moisture is needed.

Corn, oats and rye sympathized with wheat weakness. A cargo of Canadian barley was reported to have been worked to the United States today. Despite hog market downturns, provisions were steadied by liberal purchasing of lard for cash houses.

Wheat Crop in Argentina Is Reported Satisfactory

Buenos Aires, Oct. 25 (AP).—The Agricultural Statistic Bureau reported the wheat crop satisfactory today, but belated frost may develop mildew.

Flax and forage were reported excellent and the corn good, but the fruit crop was underdeveloped. The finance ministry determined to help the wool producers by buying their drafts from the purchasers at sale prices to be fixed by the exchange bureau, less 5 per cent to go into a fund to cover possible losses.

German Currency Coverage.

Berlin, Oct. 25 (AP).—The gold and foreign exchange coverage of German currency was unofficially reported today as increasing from 2.26 to 2.41 per cent in the Reichsbank during the last week.

Cuban Sugar Stocks Drop Below 1933

World Exports Total 76.6 Per Cent of Total Production.

New York, Oct. 25.—Official figures of the Cuban Export Corporation received today by the New York Coffee & Sugar Exchange disclose much interesting data on the Cuban sugar situation. The exchange finds that:

Stocks on the entire island of Cuba as of October 15 were 1,570,407 Spanish long tons, compared with 1,641,508 in 1933 and 1,938,000 tons in 1932.

Exports from Cuba to the world from January 1 to October 15 totaled 1,743,602 tons, an amount equivalent to 76.6 per cent of this year's production, which will closely approximate 2,277,000 tons. Nine hundred ninety thousand seven hundred and one tons are destined for the United States, 56.8 per cent of the total exports.

Exports to the United States so far are equivalent to 58.3 per cent of the 1,901,752 (short tons raw value) quota assigned Cuba under the Costigan-Jones act. However, trade estimates indicate that nearer 70 per cent of the quota has been filled when the stocks of Cuban sugars, raw and refined, that were on hand here at the beginning of the year, are taken into account.

Of interest in connection with the stories of heavy exports of refined sugar to Europe by U. S. refiners in competition with European refined, are figures showing that to October 15 the Cuban Export Corporation has shipped 50,388 tons of sugar to U. S. refiners for this purpose. Ten thousand seven hundred sixty-one tons were shipped prior to August 15 this year, while since then, 39,627 tons were shipped, 20,535 tons during the first half of October. This sugar was sold at a slight premium over the world price (which was in the neighborhood of 1 cent per pound) enabling U. S. refiners to compete successfully in European markets. These sugars were from stocks segregated under the Chadbourne plan, only 17,000 tons of which are left for shipment this year.

Abigail Adams, daughter of a New England clergyman named William Smith, was the first mistress of the White House. She was the wife of one President and the mother of another. The first, John Adams, was inaugurated in 1797, serving until 1801, when he retired after his defeat by Thomas Jefferson and Aaron Burr in the Presidential race of 1800. The President who was the son of Abigail Adams was John Quincy Adams, sixth President of the United States, who was elected in 1824 to begin his term March 4, 1825.

Abigail Adams did not live to see her son chosen to the highest office of the Nation. She died in 1818.

Copper, because of its cheapness, is an unsatisfactory metal for coinage—even the familiar one-cent piece in American money represents but a small fraction of a cent in actual value as metal. Yet the Swedish government once undertook to coin copper money in 10-daler pieces—these "coins" were 10 by 14 inches and half an inch thick.

The word "coffee" in English is an adaptation of the Arabian word "gahwah" or Turkish "qahveh," meaning "wine." The Turks pronounce it "kahveh." "Coffee" came into use in the English language at the close of the sixteenth century.

Outlook for Peace Seen Discouraging

'But It Can Be Gotten,' Says MacDonald.

London, Oct. 25 (AP).—Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, in his first address since he returned from vacation in Canada, tonight declared the outlook for world peace "rather discouraging," but asserted "we can get peace in our time if we have an intelligent population backing up our efforts."

A distinguished audience at the Peace Society, including United States Ambassador Robert W. Bingham, heard the prime minister say Great Britain held to her determination to advance disarmament by keeping her navy below treaty limits "until the conclusion was plainly written in front of us."

In defense of the League of Nations, the prime minister said the fact that it gave an opportunity to the world's premiers and foreign secretaries to meet each other justified its existence.

DENNIE

Apple Mary's Grandson

"Yoo-hoo, Tom! Hello, Jane! Hi Dick! Gee, I'd like to be down there with you kids. Let's see you play leapfrog and hopscotch."

Blonde, blue-eyed Dennie waits patiently for the day when he may join his little friends in play . . . money and an operation impede the road to his full recovery . . . so Gran'ma, affectionately called "Apple Mary," labors with her apple cart to make it possible . . . her one thought is to see little Dennie healthy and strong again.

From the maelstrom of city streets, from the depths of a loving grandmother's heart for a motherless, crippled lad, the story of Apple Mary and Dennie sweeps from the scintillating pen of Martha Orr, brilliant girl cartoonist.

Baltimore Ends Hunt For Washington Man

Baltimore police yesterday called off harbor-dragging for the body of H. Van Dorn Robinson, whose coat was found Wednesday on a dock with notes indicating suicide. Walt Mason, Himself

Thick-Skinned.

In bygone times the British writers would come pirooting to this shore, and then go home, the graceless blighters, and write us up, and make us sore. They ridiculed our little habits, in ignorance we all were sunk, they sized us up as sordid Babbitts, whose only idol was the plunk. The first perhaps was Mrs. Trollop, who viewed this country through her tears, and gave America a wallop that kept us mad for many years. She couldn't see a thing that pleased her, although she hunted everywhere; our institutions bored and teased her, our customs drove her to despair. And then came Dickens, blithe and cheerful, who laughed at all our foolish ways, and left us hot and tired and tearful—from him we had expected praise. And so they came, a long procession, and traveled o'er our sacred loam, and seemed to make a loud profession of loving us—till they got home. And then, forgetting all our presents, they took their pens, resolved to vex, and said we were a lot of peasants who tied our napkins round our necks. Too sensitive, we then resented the pinpricks of the British scribes; but now our hides, so often dented, defy the spears of all the tribes. We are so conscious of our merit it cuts no grass what people say; we merely nod and grin and bear it if we are roasted every day. We recognize our worth so fully, we pause not in our little game, if some attacker, wild and woolly, comes up to climb upon our frame.

Underwood & Underwood.

Carefully a group of skilled workers at Treasury are seeking to identify a number of almost hopelessly charred bills taken from the Morro Castle wreckage so that whenever possible the owners may be issued new certificates for their otherwise useless currency. Photo shows Miss Bertha O. Sherfy (*), chief of Identification Section, examining some of the bills. Miss Sherfy and her coworkers identify and redeem thousands of dollars which are damaged in other manners.

By Morgan Baker.

THERE is no restriction as to signing any petition for or against the soldier bonus, provided the person signs as an individual and not as a Government employe, Harry B. Mitchell, Civil Service Commission president, has ruled.

BAKER.

Any civil servant is perfectly free to sign such petitions in his own name as long as he does not become a leader in the movement, Mr. Mitchell adds.

"The line that divides what is political activity and what is not is often uncertain, but this commission * * * prefers to err on the side of safety for the merit system, rather than to take the chance of injuring that system," he said.

With a goal of 200 members by Christmas, District Building Lodge, No. 87, mapped plans last night at its meeting at the Harrington Hotel. Progress in the sanitary engineer's office, Highway Department, collector of taxes and the water registrar's office is reported by William F. Franklin, president. Charles I. Stengle, assistant to the president of the American Federation of Government Employes, and Miss Esther Penn, National secretary, attended the session and spoke briefly.

FOLLOWING their marriage Saturday at the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Butturss (*) have moved into a home of their own at 1227 Forty-fourth place southeast. Mrs. Butturss is the former Miss Dorothy Dow, social room, White House, also a former employe at General Land Office, Interior. Mr. Butturss is with Home Owners Loan Corporation. The bride is from LaCrosse, Wis., and the bridegroom is from Sioux Falls, S. Dak.

Formation of an American Legion post is under way at Treasury, with J. I. Bellow, Procurement Division, leading in the organization work. Application for a temporary charter will be made in the next two weeks, with a roll of several hundred members. All veterans in Treasury are invited to contact Mr. Bellow at Room 719, Federal Warehouse, or by telephone National 4650, branch 643.

Election of Edward J. Gainor, president of the National Association of Letter Carriers, as a vice president of the American Federation of Labor, is significant to Government employes in that it gives them a closer tie with the A. F. of L. Being a vice president, of course, places Mr. Gainor on the federation's executive council, which maps the policies of the federation.
